

U.S. to scrap civil rights job plan

By PAUL DELANEY
WASHINGTON — The Nixon administration has quietly decided to scrap the Philadelphia Plan according to sources in the administration.

The plan, once the administration's major civil rights program, was a highly publicized effort to place minorities in skilled jobs in the construction industry in the Pennsylvania city through a system of quotas. The original plan was emulated in at least two dozen cities, in what were called "hometown" plans. Unlike the Philadelphia Plan, the others were voluntary. The sources reported that these plans are also threatened.

The sources, along with Arthur A. Fletcher, the former assistant secretary of labor who was in charge of administering the plans, said the decision to drop it would be in line with the administration's new policy of opposing job quotas for minorities. Further, they said, that policy is aimed at attracting support during this election year from organized labor, which strongly opposed the plan designed to force building-trades unions to accept minorities as members. Fletcher, who resigned from the administration last year and is the executive director of the United Negro College Fund in New York City, said friends of his within the White House and Labor Department had apprised him of the decision several days ago. A lifelong Republican, he was especially bitter, and for the first time publicly denounced President Nixon in harsh terms both during an interview and in a speech he made Sunday at Reston, Va.

James Hodgson, Secretary of Labor, said the administration has not decided to drop the Philadelphia Plan. However, he added that all programs involving percentages were being reviewed. "We're reviewing the whole thing in light of the President's letter about quotas," he said. "We're reviewing everything we are doing that might be affected by the policy. But we never conceded that we had a quota system. We always considered them as goals and timetables. A quota puts a ceiling and lid on your effort while goals and timetables say to contractors that if you can't make them, then prove to us you made a good-faith effort."

However, Fletcher and others felt the decision had been made at a higher level, in the White House.

Death penalty without trial Thieu assumes new power

SAIGON, Monday (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu has assumed the power to pass sentence without trial and has ordered the death penalty for a number of offenses, the official government news agency Vietnam Press announced today.

The death penalty was decreed for hijacking, armed robbery and rape and for persons who force women into prostitution. The new penalty for persons involved in organized gambling is five years' imprisonment.

Thieu signed the new laws under special powers granted him to deal with the national emergency resulting from North Vietnam's offensive in South Vietnam. One of the laws gives Thieu and other officials under him the authority to hand out sentences without trial to servicemen and civil servants accused of treason, membership in a Communist organization, rebellion in the armed forces, violation of military or administrative orders when facing the enemy, desertion, rape and murder, the agency said.

Other offenses included under this law are gambling, prostitution, illegal transfer of money, smuggling, narcotics violations, embezzlement and the stealing of war supplies for resale.

SAIGON, Monday (AP) — Typhoon Elsie struck South Vietnam's northern coastline just before dawn today and brought U.S. military operations to a virtual standstill. Earlier U.S. Air Force jets wrecked one of North Vietnam's biggest air bases 10 miles north of Hanoi and shot down a Soviet-built interceptor in a dogfight near the base. The strikes against the Phuc Yen airfield Saturday were the first attacks on that base in 4½ years.

Thieu ordered the death penalty for anyone who hijacks an aircraft or a ship. "Anyone who is present at the scene is authorized to fire his individual weapon to shoot down the law breakers," the law says.

The new law specifies that hijacking cases will be under the jurisdiction of the Vietnamese courts if the hijackers are captured in the air space or territorial waters of Vietnam or if the offenders live in Vietnam.

Thieu also declared that the Vietnamese courts have jurisdiction for judging hijack cases that occur beyond the air space and territorial waters of Vietnam if the aircraft and ships bear the Vietnamese flag and if extradition of the accused persons is approved.

Nixon woos blue collar ranks

By BOB HOUSER
I. P.T. Political Editor
SAN CLEMENTE — President Nixon Sunday made a partisan Labor Day pitch for blue collar election support on themes of a work ethic versus a welfare ethic, opposition to busing for school integration and announced formation of a National Commission for Industrial Peace.

The President pigeon-holed labor's "treadmill" period and the nation's segregation bitterness to Democratic years as opposed to his assurances that the country now "is on the road to the kind of real prosperity that will last."

From 1965 to 1970, Nixon said, the American worker was on a treadmill, his wage increases eaten away by taxes and inflation stemming from "too much government spending in the sixties."

Now, he said, real income of the average worker is up six per cent and he is "making real progress."

"More Americans have jobs now than ever before — two and a half million more than a year ago, with new jobs being created at the fastest rate in more than 20 years. As a result, the unemployment rate is lower now than it was last Labor Day."

Nixon said he will not be satisfied, however, until the administration reaches its goal of full employment without inflation and without war.

Inflation has been cut in half during his administration, he said, and the squeeze on excessive government spending will continue. He said he will veto congressional legislation which calls for new spending which would lead to higher taxes or higher prices.

With work stoppages at a six-year low, Nixon said this is the best time for labor, management and government to get together to make industrial peace an even more regular habit.

To that end he announced formation of the National Commission for Industrial Peace. To avoid attachment of a partisan label to the commission, Nixon said he will not appoint its members until after the November election. But he said he will order preliminary staff work by the secretary of labor and the director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Commission recommendations, Nixon said, would include how to improve collective bargaining, how government may play a more helpful role in bargaining and how the inter-

Meany raps both candidates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany, labeling both presidential candidates "unsatisfactory," said Sunday Sen. George S. McGovern was "an apologist for the Communist world" with a poor labor record in Congress.

In unusually strong remarks, which tended to favor President Nixon, Meany said he and the AFL-CIO would continue to withhold endorsement of either McGovern or Nixon in the November election.

He said, however, that independent labor polls of union sentiment show "a swing away from the Democrats. The polls show about a 50-50 break now. It used to be that labor would be 80 per cent registered Democrats, but no more."

"When I look at the men who are candidates for president, I've got to look at them as a president and as an American," Meany said. "When I read what George McGovern stands for and I find out he's an apologist for the Communist world . . .

"McGovern said there would have been no trouble after World War II if we had handled it differently . . . He said Communism was all right for people who choose it. There are no countries in the world where people choose Communism . . .

Meany also said he did not approve of Nixon's recent trips to Russia and China. "I think he's playing an international chess game," he said. "I have serious misgivings about it."

The labor leader made his remarks on CBS-TV's "Face The Nation."

M'Govern 'won't concede South'

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Sen. George McGovern, after a two-hour meeting with the governors of 18 deep South and border states Sunday, said he faced an uphill fight "to carry this section of the nation, but there might be some surprises on election day."

The Democratic presidential nominee told a news conference that he had visited "informally with the Southern governors" at a reception and dinner in the posh Plantation Club on this resort island off the South Carolina coast where the 38th annual Southern Governors Conference opened Sunday.

The senator said he was "pleased with the response and I will conduct a campaign throughout the South."

McGovern said he was not discounting any state, whether it was in the deep South or in any other section of the nation.

"I won't concede a single state."

The senator said he did not have "any Southern strategy, because I don't think a person ought to have a Southern strategy. If he is for all the people, I think he ought to have a national strategy."

On the subject of civil rights, he said, "I think it is a mistake to think the people in the South feel differently about civil rights than people in other parts of the country."

McGovern was asked about the busing of school children to achieve racial balance and he answered,

"People in the South are making good progress on this — perhaps better than some areas of our nation."

After the meeting, Gov. John C. West of South Carolina announced he would vote for McGovern.

Earlier, McGovern formally kicked off his presidential campaign with an airport rally in nearby Savannah, Ga., and pledged to push tax reform as a central theme of his drive for the White House.

The rally was the first stop on McGovern's first extended tour since he won the Democratic nomination at Miami Beach.

"The South Dakota senator noted that President Nixon said at the Republican convention that the November election would present the voters with a clear choice of political philosophies."

McGovern said, "I agree with that absolutely" and said the choice is between an administration that "does the bidding of the great special interests" and "the opportunity to restore government to the hands of the people so the voice of the people is heard in the councils of Washington."

He said one challenge awaiting the next president is "how can we devise a tax system in this country that is fair to everyone."

"I don't want to soak the rich, I want them to pay their fair share," said McGovern to thunderous applause.

750 forest fires blamed on lightning

By Associated Press

Smokey the Bear may be shaking his fist at the sky today instead of wagging a warning paw at holiday visitors to California's 17 National Forests where lightning has caused 750 forest fires since last Monday.

More than 200 of the storm-initiated fires have occurred in Northern California this weekend, and the forecast was for the bolts to continue to strike in the high country over the next day or two, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman said.

The worst National Forest fires were west of Yreka in the Klamath National Forest where lightning started 51 fires — most of them in the Marble Mountain Wilderness Area, a region of virgin pine and fir accessible only by helicopter or foot trail.

Five 20-acre fires and one 70-acre one still were spreading Sunday night, but the others were contained, forestry information officer Jerry Gause said.

A heavy pall of smoke created visibility problems for helicopters and air tankers employed by the fire fighters. Six helicopters and six air tankers were being used on the Klamath fires where more than 400 men were working.

The Plumas National Forest has had 111 fires for the week, Gause said, but of the 50 burning Sunday, most were confined to less than an acre.

The major fire outside the National Forests was an 800-acre blaze in scrub-oak and brush in Paradise Canyon, five-miles east of Clear Lake. It was contained Sunday afternoon, and the number of men on the fireline was reduced by half to 100, a State Division of Forestry spokesman said.

Long Beach recorded the county's heaviest rainfall Sunday as showers that promise to dampen the entire Labor Day weekend began to fall in earnest. More rain is expected to Hyacinth about 800 miles west southwest of La Paz. It's pushing moisture into the Southland from off the coast of Baja California, the service said.

Thundershowers triggered a flash flood in the Mojave Desert, washing at least four vehicles from Interstate 40.

In the Imperial Valley-Salton Sea area high winds caused dust storms that cut visibility to near zero, authorities said.

Interstate 40 was closed for more than an hour a mile west of Ludlow where the vehicles were swept from the road, authorities said. None of the occupants was believed seriously injured.

Fischer accepts $76,125 prize

Combined News Services

Bobby Fischer accepted the $76,125 winner's purse, gold medal and certificate Sunday night and played out the last game with defeated chess champion

Boris Spassky before sitting down to a gala banquet in his honor. Fischer also received cable congratulations from President Nixon. Fischer played with his pocket chess board during most of the closing ceremonies of the chess championship and appeared totally absorbed in his game until called forward to collect his money. He made no speech, studied the check in the envelope and returned to his seat and chessboard. Spassky accepted the loser's check for $46,825. Earlier Fischer, sitting at the same table as Spassky, went to the defeated champion, took out his chessboard and put the pieces in the adjourned position of the final game. The two played the position several times. Later, Fischer said his win had been assured. Spassky nodded agreement.

Fischer has decided to extend his stay in Iceland for a few days to go sightseeing. Spassky also is staying on to get in some salmon fishing.

Leniency?

Clutching her two children beside her, Edith Irving flew from New York to Zurich Sunday night to face fraud and forgery charges for her part in the Howard Hughes "autobiography" hoax.

The 36-year-old Mrs. Irving, who already served a two-month jail sentence in the United States because of her role in the hoax engineered by her husband, Clifford, was accompanied by the children, Nedsky, 4, and Barnaby, 2, and a family friend, Kay Peters.

Looking exhausted, an unsmiling Mrs. Irving said she hoped the Swiss would "show leniency toward me."

Once disabled by polio, she hopes to dance to beauty title

Miss Alabama, whose right leg was withered by polio when she was three, said Sunday in Atlantic City, N.J., that she hopes to dance her way to the Miss America crown this week.

Freita Fuller, of Opelika, Ala., arrived here this weekend with 48 other contestants in preparation for Tuesday night's opening ceremonies.

The 19-year-old Auburn University junior said she'll perform a difficult Tahitian dance during the talent competition Saturday night. It culminates 16 years of effort.

When she was stricken with polio, she said, her mother, a registered nurse, had her dance on the dining table for therapy.

At 12, she was admitted to the Birmingham Crippled Children's Hospital, where the doctors were "amazed" she was able to walk.

"They said I owed my whole life to dancing," she explained.

Even today, the brown-haired, brown-eyed teen's right leg is one and a half inches smaller than her left.

"I used to feel that because of my leg I never won anything," she said. "My mother, who is very religious, asked me to pray. I prayed to God to give me strength not to feel badly about my leg."

That's why she brought along her "strength builder," a stone from the Jordan River, and a Bible made in Jerusalem, she said.

The elderly Hillsboro, N.M., man was killed when a wall of water collapsed the structure of his adobe home. A member of a rescue squad said four the seven missing were campers whose camper truck was found bashed into pieces at a nearby campground. Another man reported missing was last seen "bouncing down the river about 35 miles an hour," according to the rescue worker. His car was later found empty buried under mud and debris.

No agreement yet

NEW YORK — Albert Shanker, president of the United Federation of Teachers, said Sunday he was "worried" it might be too late to reach a compromise contract agreement averting a strike against the city's 1.1-million student school system, largest in the nation. Shanker said working conditions remained the chief stumbling block in talks between the 60,000-member union and the board of education, while calling the salary issue the "easiest" to resolve.

Dockers back on job

VANCOUVER, B.C. — About 100 longshoremen turned up for work Sunday on the Vancouver waterfront, but only three of the men were assigned jobs at the union hiring hall. It will be Tuesday before large-scale work resumes on the docks. The strike began Aug. 7, but the union called men back after the passage of back-to-work legislation by Parliament at a special sitting last week.

Inmates confined to cells

CARSON CITY, Nev. — All inmates at Nevada State Prison were confined to their cells Sunday while authorities investigated the fire bombing of the mess hall. Warden Carl Hocker ordered two convicts placed in solitary confinement after three fire bombs were tossed into the empty dining room Saturday. Damage was minor and there were no injuries. Hocker, who refused to identify the suspects, said the rest of the prisoners would be locked in their cells and fed sandwiches twice a day until his staff has completed its investigation.

More medical care needed

TRENTON — Checkups by National Guard medics at Trenton and Rahway state prisons revealed three out of five inmates needed further medical treatment, the state reported this weekend. The Department of Institutions and Agencies made public two reports filed by the National Guard doctors, who conducted examinations inside the prisons on willing inmates for the first time under a program launched by Gov. William T. Cahill.

3 die in plane crash

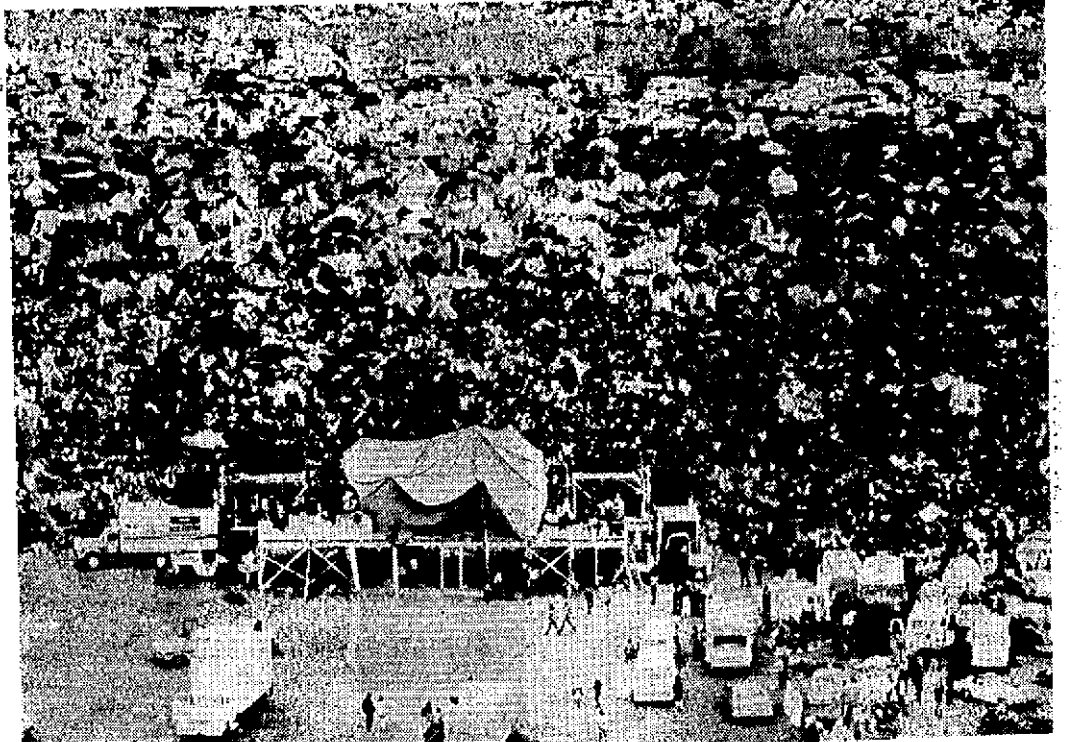

KEYSTONE HEIGHTS, Fla. — A single-engine Cessna Skylane struck a power line and crashed near a deserted North Florida airport early Sunday, killing three persons and injuring critically two others. A Florida Highway Patrol spokesman said the wreckage was discovered five hours after the crash by a work crew tracing the source of a power outage. The crash apparently occurred either while the small plane was making a low pass over Keystone Heights Airport or while attempting to regain altitude after experiencing difficulty during a landing approach.

'Cod war' arrests seen

REYKJAVIK, Iceland — Iceland's minister of fisheries, Ludvig Josefsson, said he expected arrests "very soon" of British trawlers fishing within the newly established 50-mile limit off the Icelandic coast. The coast guard said 61 British trawlers had violated the fishing limit by late Saturday. British trawlers have said they will not adhere to the Iceland's extension of its territorial waters from 12 to 50 miles, touching off fears of a new "cod war."

Ousting of Uganda urged

DUDLEY, England. — The National Standing Conference of Asian Organizations, which represents 80 Asian groups, Sunday called for the expulsion of Uganda from the British Commonwealth. In a resolution that will be sent to all members of the Commonwealth, the standing conference said Uganda's plan to expel 50,000 Asians was "not only inhuman and unjust, but is racist in the worst form." European line Harvard Prof. Abram Chayes arrived Sunday in Frankfurt to tell West German politicians what line Democratic candidate George McGovern will adopt towards Europe if he wins the U.S. presidential election.

West Germany is one of the staunchest U.S. allies in Europe and Chancellor Willy Brandt's government makes no secret of its uneasiness about McGovern's proposal to reduce the 300,000 U.S. troops stationed in Europe by half within three years. Most of these troops are stationed in West Germany.

Brandt recently said unilateral U.S. withdrawals would seriously weaken proposed talks with the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact nations on mutually balanced force reductions.

Fair share

I own a small business and I would like to set up a profit sharing plan for my employees. Can ACTION LINE tell me where I can get some information on how to establish such a plan. R. B., Paramount.

Joseph C. Plummer, chairman of the business department at Woodbury College in Los Angeles, told ACTION LINE that there are several good books which outline a step-by-step method for establishing a profit sharing plan. He said that most public and college libraries have these books. They are listed in the card catalog under the subject heading of "profit sharing." You should consult the most recently published book you can find. The U.S. Small Business Administration also publishes an inexpensive booklet on profit sharing. An order blank for the book has been sent to you. Plummer said that if you still have any questions after doing your initial research, you can contact him at Woodbury College, 1027 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90012, and he will discuss them with you.

Slow boat to Japan

In December we sent a check for $9.95 to Billboard Publications Inc. in Cincinnati, Ohio, for a year's subscription to Modern Photography magazine to be sent to our son who lives in Yokohama, Japan. He never received a single issue and we cannot get an answer to our letters of inquiry to Billboard. Can ACTION LINE help get the magazines to our son? Mrs. W. C. Long Beach.

A new one year's subscription to Modern Photography has been entered for your son with Billboard Publications in Cincinnati. However, ACTION LINE got no assurances from Billboard that your son would get the magazines. "We'll try again," said subscription department spokesman B. J. Anella. "But we have a real problem with regular rate subscriptions sent overseas." She explained that for the regular price of $9.95, the magazines are sent by surface mail, which apparently is not very reliable to Japan. If you care to spend $40 a year, Billboard will air-jet Modern Photography directly to your son and "he'll be sure to get it then."

I have twin daughters who quickly outgrow their expensive matching outfits. There must be other mothers of twins who could use these clothes. Does ACTION LINE have any suggestions? S.K., Bellflower.

You might want to join the Long Beach-Lakewood Twins' Mothers Club, which meets the second Wednesday evening of each month at Bloomfield Park Clubhouse in Lakewood. The group collects toys and clothing for its "exchange corner," where you may be able to trade your daughters' outfits. For more information, contact membership chairman Sandy Weinheimer, (714) 828-5619 or president Mary Jane Reed at 423-0819.

On Feb. 5, I ordered a lamp for $30.43 from Alexander Sales Corp. in Mount Vernon, N.Y. Three weeks later I got a card saying my order was being processed and would arrive within six to eight weeks. Near the end of April I wrote the company because I hadn't received the lamp. I still have not got it. Can ACTION LINE help? S.L., Bellflower.

Alexander Sales Corp. is bankrupt and all its property and assets are in the hands of trustees, according to a spokesman for the White Plains, N.Y. Belter Business Bureau. If you (and anyone else with a claim against the company) will write to Trustees for Alexander Sales Corp., United States Court, 30 S. J.R., Long Beach.

light since Adam and Eve. The Los Angeles conference, which began Saturday and ends Wednesday, has drawn 3,000 theological scholars from universities, religious centers and institutions throughout the United States, with many also coming from abroad.

Prof. Mary Daly of the Boston College faculty said smilingly that part of the trouble could even be illustrated by the small size of their seminar room — jammed to overflowing with both men and women sprawling on the floor and into the hallway.

SHE unsmilingly observed another point — that the conference title is "The Humanizing of Man," which she said slights women and is couched in male terms.

Later the seminar on women was assigned a large meeting room and appeared, with more than 300 in attendance, to outdraw 15 other seminars running concurrently.

Prof. Daly said women had been relegated to the fringes of religion in a "male-dominated" system and had even been faced in some theologies with a "divine disapproval of women."

"BREAKING out of the circle requires anger, I mean a beautiful, creative anger," she asserted, drawing appreciative "right on" and applauding responses with such terms as "emerging women" and "the unfolding of the woman consciousness."

Prof. Rosemary Radford Ruether, who is joining the Harvard School of Divinity faculty this fall, assailed Biblical interpretations and particularly those of St. Augustine.

Prof. Ruether, who said she is a Roman Catholic, quoted St. Augustine — one of the Catholics' most important historical thinkers — as viewing the female as a "temptress."

St. Augustine hoped, she said, that the female would be "forgetful of her natural feminine wickednesses" and by following a righteous life would "assume manly vigor."

SHE SAID opposition to birth control had a foundation in St. Augustine's view that sex was permissible "only in obedience to God's command to increase and multiply."

St. Augustine's outlook treated "women as sex objects," she declared, adding that in his view sex was "either dirty or just used for making babies."

The women drew support from a male speaker, Bernard P. Prusak of Villanova University, who said the Bible "implies that Eve seduced Adam."

"And Adam doesn't let her forget it," Prusak added. "He even orders her to tell her children how she caused the fall" of mankind from God's grace.

Prof. Prusak asserted that the "put-down" of women in Genesis, the first book of the Bible, called into question whether the "fall of man" shouldn't be relegated to what he called the shaky status of the "six-day creation" myth.

HE SAID women's historic place in religious institutions was the result of a male-dominated church structure rather than the will of God.

St. Paul, he said, had established the idea that women should wear head coverings, a doctrine some churches follow today.

"Why is the uncovered hair of a woman defective, especially when Paul regards it as her 'crowning glory' at another point? he asked rhetorically.

Prusak also said the male-oriented early church had dubiously concluded that "Adam was created first, and then Eve," and declared that harmful myths had been perpetuated through the ages.

"Today, some of the prejudices exist a part from the myths," he said, such as Paul's doctrine that women should be "silent in church" and that "if there is anything a woman should know, let them ask their husband at home."

MANY male theologians nodded agreement at the feminist forum's points, although some in muted conversations suggested the women seemed to be setting up a narrow doctrine or taking past wrongs too hard.

The women, although almost exclusively couching their quarrels with historical themes in scholarly terms, responded that some church doctrines remain unchanged and that some ministerial clerical positions, such as the priesthood, remain all male.

Southlanders join Labor weekend toll

An Orange County man and a Los Angeles youth became the fifth and sixth Southland fatalities in the mounting death toll logged this holiday weekend.

Almost 400 persons had died in accidents nationwide by midnight Sunday as Labor Day celebrants entered the third day of the holiday weekend.

National Safety Council predictions expect more than 600 fatalities before midnight tonight.

Clifford E. Freeman, 52, of 11501 Baggett St., was killed about 8:45 p.m. Saturday a block from his Garden Grove home as he crossed a street. Police said Freeman was dead at the scene after being struck by a car in the intersection of Orangewood Avenue and Dolan Street. The driver was not held, police said.

Seven-year-old Mark Savorite, of 926 E. 53rd St., was fatally injured when struck by a car as he darted from between parked autos near his home about 9 p.m. Saturday.

Highway patrol officers said the youth died at County-USC Medical Center. The driver was not held pending investigation, they said.

California led the nation in traffic deaths late Sunday with 28 fatalities. Illinois logged 23, New York 21, and Texas and Ohio 16 each.

Nationwide, more than 350 had perished on the highways. Drowning accidents claimed 11 lives, while five persons had died in plane crashes. Other accidents accounted for 31 more deaths.

Poison danger told in eating fruit pits

BERKELEY (UPI)—The California Public Health Department warned this weekend that eating too many kernels from the pits of apricots, peaches or plums or too many apple seeds may cause a form of cyanide poisoning.

The department began looking into the problem a month ago when a Los Angeles couple became ill after eating apricot kernels bought at a health food store.

Dr. Ren Werner, a medical epidemiologist, said many fruit kernels contain a chemical which, if eaten in large quantities, can release hydrogen cyanide.

This causes potential nerve damage, intestinal upsets, blindness and ringing in the ears.

The pits are becoming a health food "craze," the state fears.

"We're not planning an immediate shutdown on the eating of apricot pits until we do some further checking," said Dr. Ralph Weilerstein, a public health officer.

"But they should certainly be eaten only in small quantities and not too often. That would be our recommendation. We're not sure they're even safe in those quantities," he said.

2 teens killed in L.A. babysitting dispute

Two young men were shot to death early Sunday in Los Angeles during an altercation with a 16-year-old youth who was babysitting for his sister.

Police withheld the sister's name because he is a juvenile, but took him into custody.

He told investigating officers that two former friends of his sister knocked at the door of her home where he was babysitting about 2 a.m. He opened the door and they forced their way in, he said. They struck him in the face and he armed himself with a gun and ordered them to leave.

The sitter told police the pair lunged at him and he fired twice, hitting them both. Dead were Ronald Polk, 17, and Richard McFarland, 19.

UAW head bitter in Nixon slap

Detroit (UPI) — United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock bitterly denounced the Nixon administration's domestic and foreign policies Sunday and urged labor to work "vigorously" for the election of George McGovern.

Woodcock's attack, in the form of a Labor Day message to workers, centered on Nixon's economic policy but also touched upon the administration's lack of success in meeting the problems of crime in the streets, pollution, health and the Vietnam war.

McGovern, on the other hand, offers "workable solutions to grave and divisive national problems" brought on by the Republican incumbent.

"We must decide between new directions or old mudpaths, new vigor or old apathy, new hope or old despair, new progress or old, continually unfulfilled promises," Woodcock said.

"On this Labor Day and in the crucial weeks ahead, we of labor must unite more firmly and vigorously than ever before to elect George McGovern."

The 1.4 million-member UAW represents McGovern's largest power base of labor support. The AFL-CIO, which also traditionally supports Democratic candidates, has declined to endorse either candidate this year and the Teamsters Union threw its support to Nixon.

WOODCOCK said the President has failed to curb inflation and has been "ineffective" in controlling the unemployment rate. At the same time, he said, "profits have soared to record levels. They were uncontrolled by the Nixon new economic game plan which rigidly curtailed increases in the wages of millions of workers."

Woodcock also criticized Nixon's record on presidential appointments — particularly those for the supreme court — and his encouragement of "a so-called strategy that creates sharp divisions between white and black citizens."

"The programs proposed by George McGovern show a clear understanding of the national issues and what must be done to solve our mounting, compelling national problem," Woodcock said.

GM chief raps McG tax plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — General Motors Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg Sunday said Sen. George McGovern's tax program would "work against" efforts to lower unemployment. He defended President Nixon's economic program.

Gerstenberg was critical of McGovern's proposal to reduce corporate tax credits and return the tax depreciation period to what it was before Nixon's economic controls program went into effect.

"I haven't studied those in detail, but two or three things in his proposals are, I think, in variance with what we ought to be seeking at the moment — the unemployment situation as it is and the intense interest on the part of everyone to reduce it," Gerstenberg said. "We think that business expansion, modernization of plants are keys in this area."

McGovern has two conditions in his tax program, that would work against it, he said.

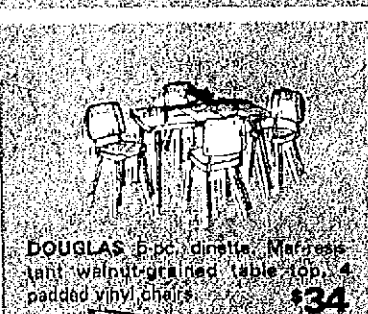

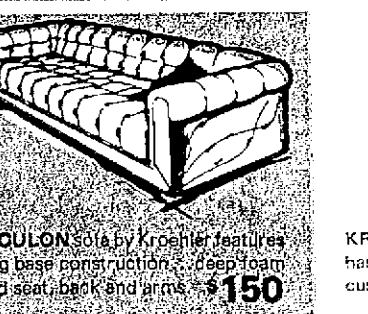

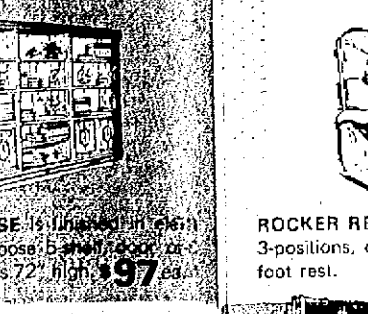

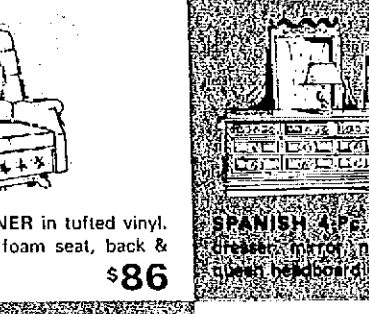

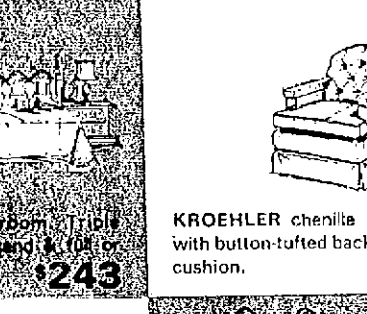

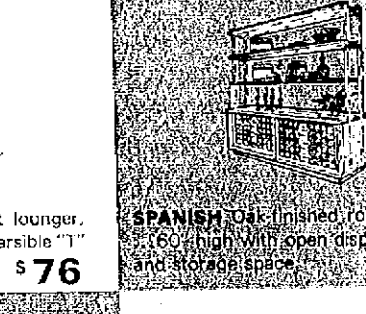

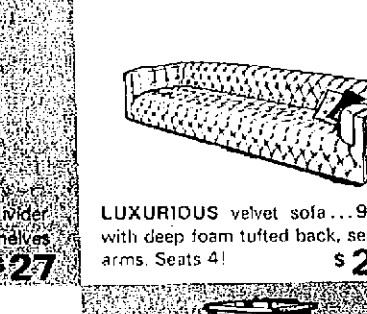

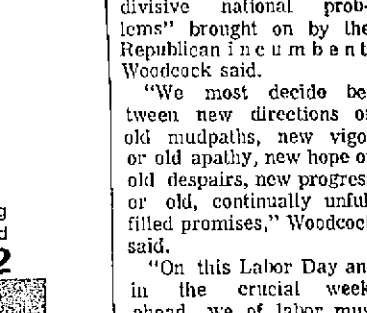

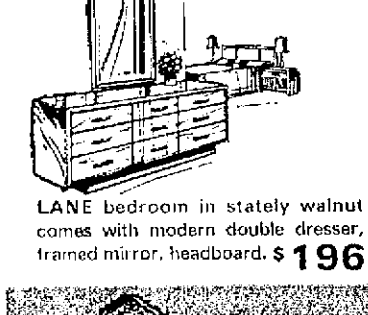

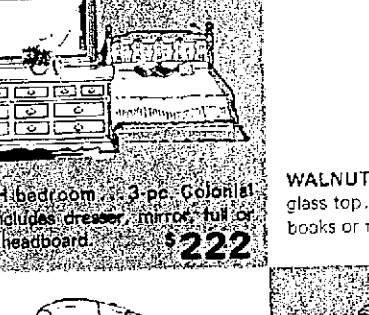

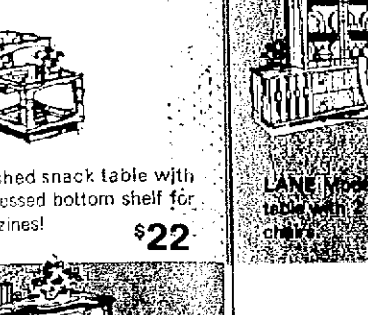

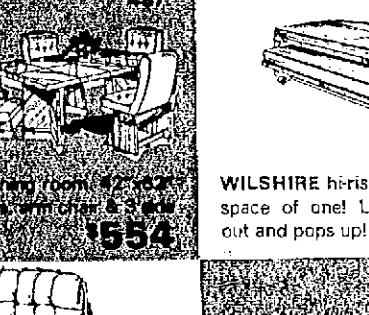

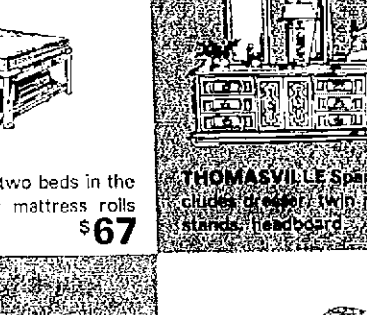

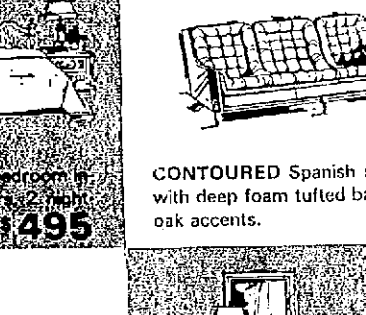

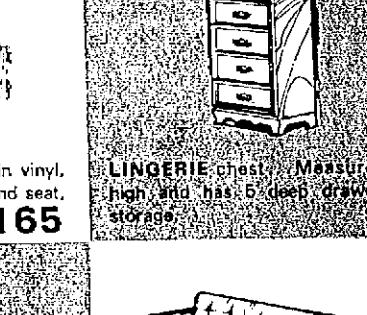

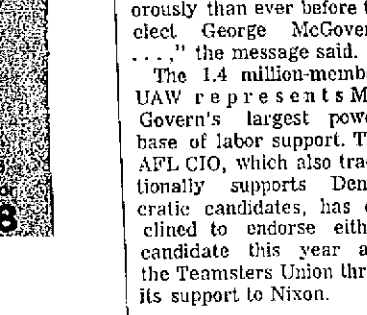

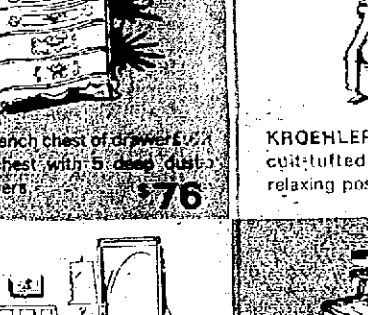

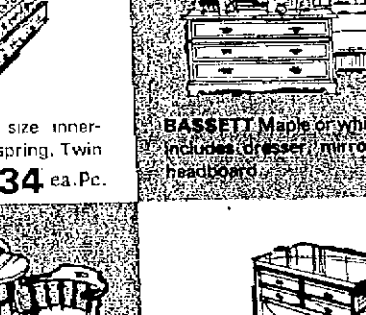

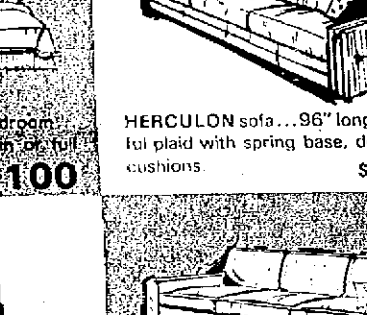

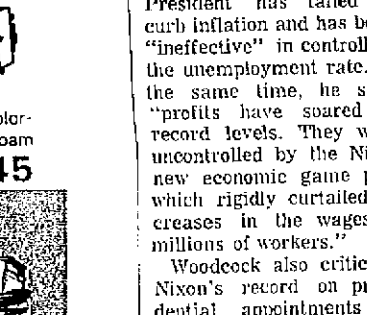

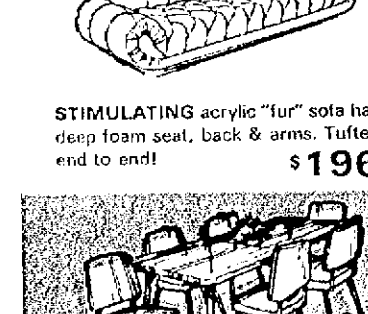

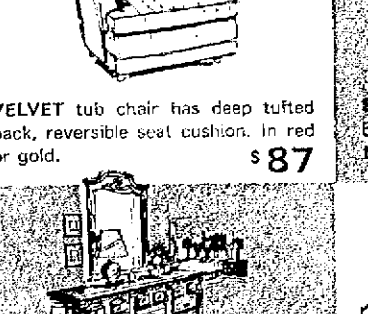

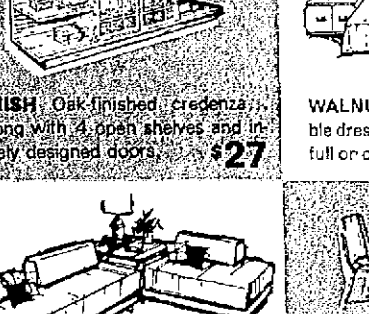

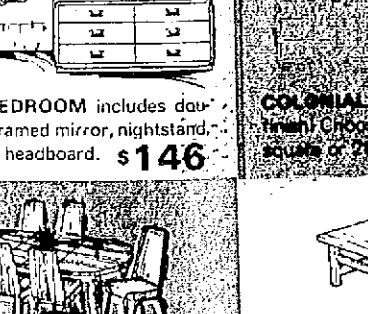

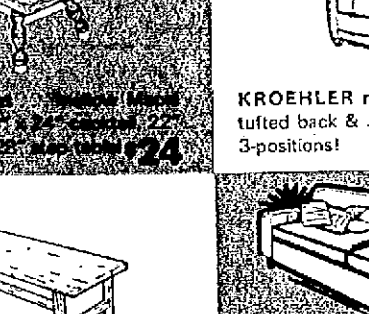

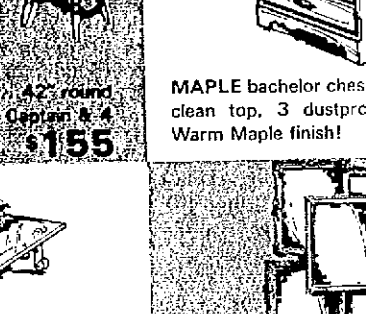

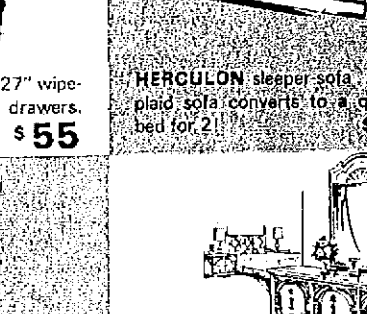

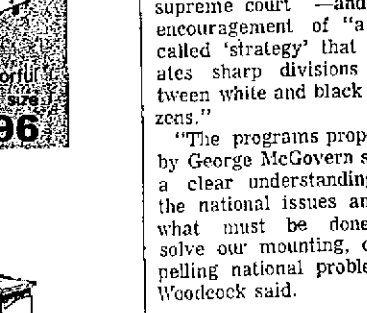

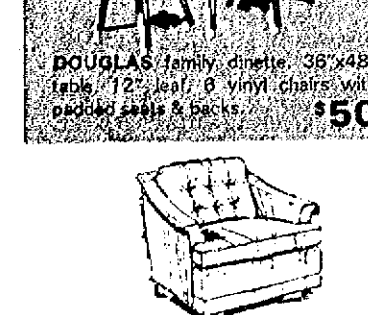

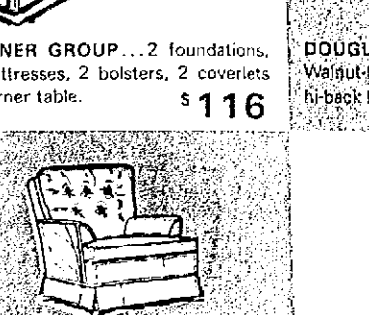

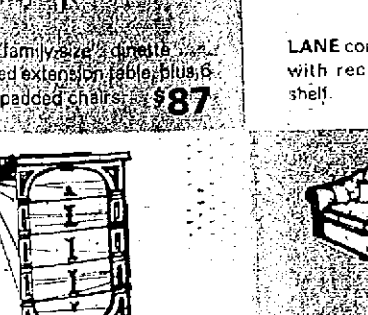

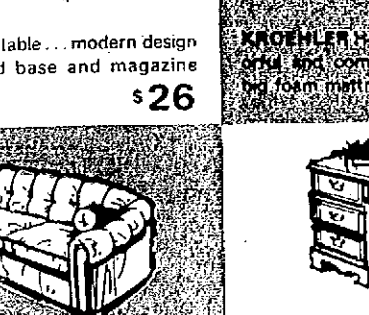

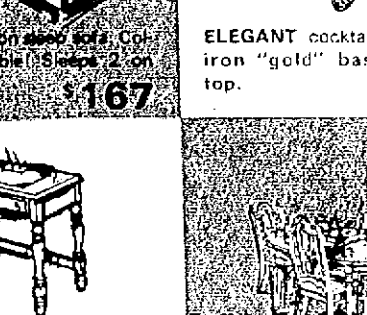

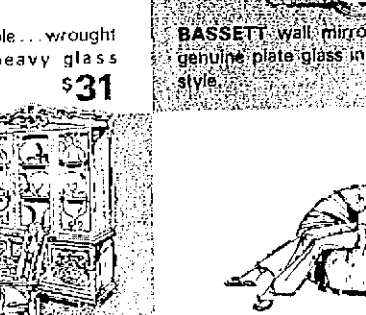

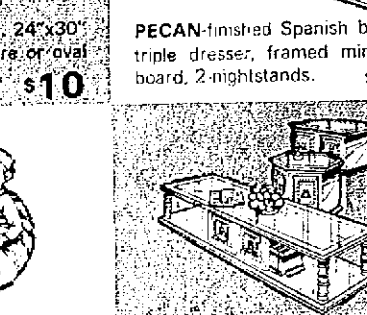

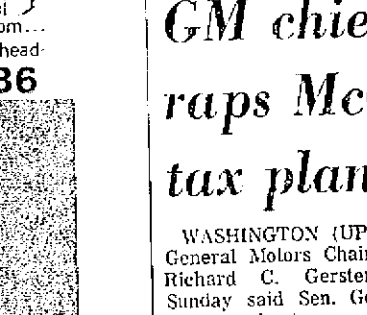

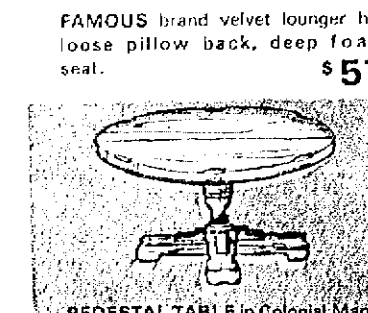

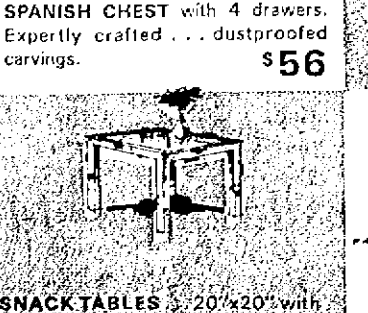

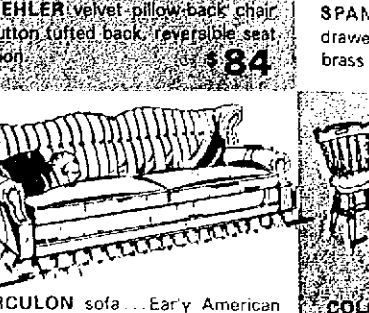

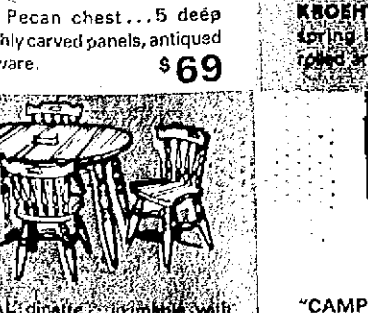

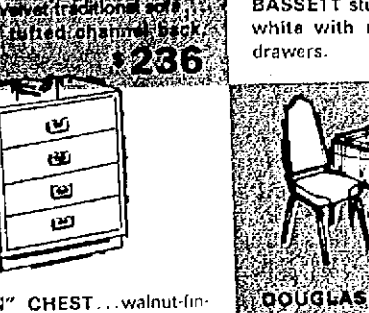

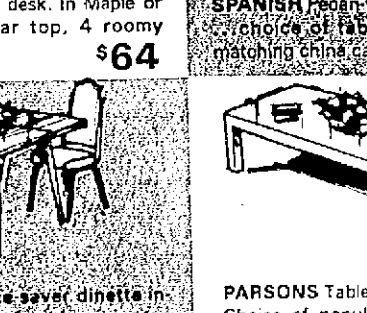

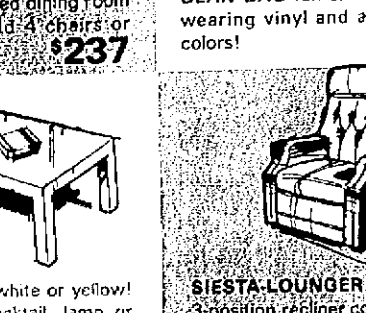

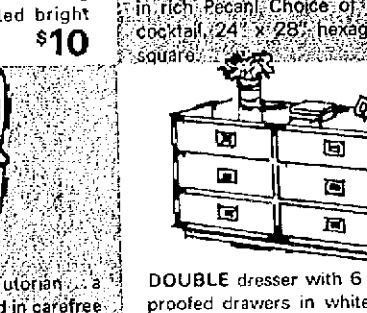

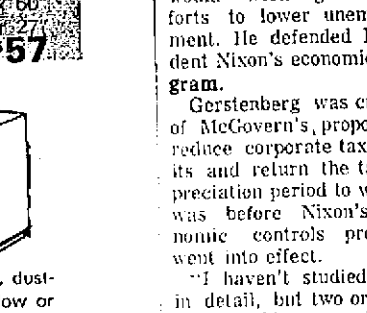

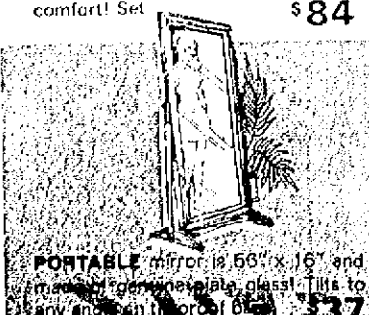

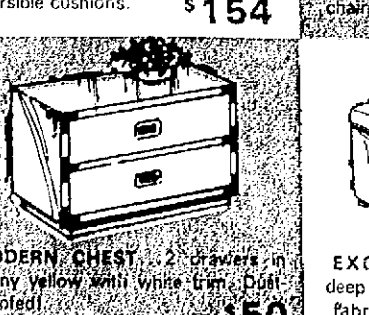

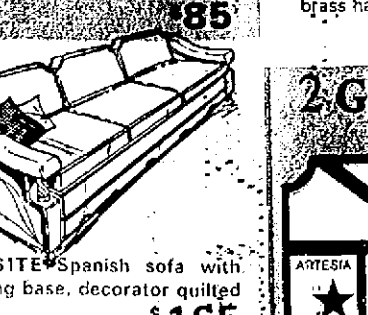

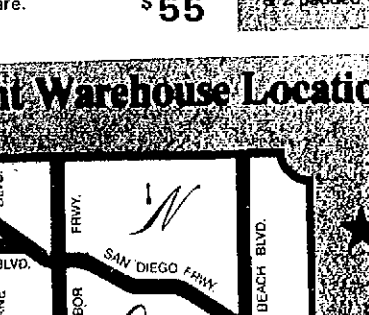

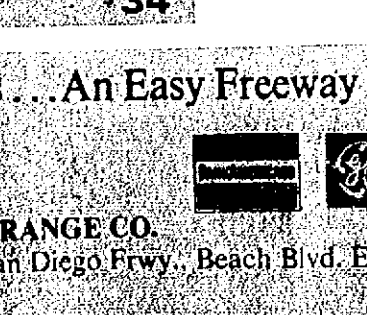

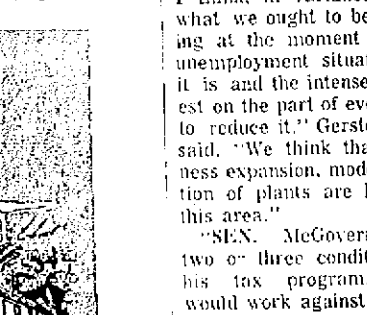

McGovern, the GM chairman said, "would withdraw the faster write off on plants and this would not help."

Meany's peevishness a major factor Labor power seen heading for a fall

By A. H. RASKIN
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Ever since Franklin D. Roosevelt instructed his lieutenants at the 1944 Democratic National Convention in Chicago to "clear it with Sidney," organized labor has been a consequential mobilizer of political manpower and money in every presidential campaign, always on the Democratic side. This year, with the union legions badly split and George Meany peevishly vowing to pull down no lever on his presidential ballot Nov. 7, the centralized political machinery that has been the main-spring of labor's influence in governmental affairs is in danger of emerging permanently weakened, perhaps even shattered beyond repair.

THE OLD Congress of Industrial Organizations, with Sidney Hillman as chairman of its Political Action Committee, blazed the original trail away from the hit-and-miss tradition of sporadic union involvement in politics — usually as tail to a Tammany-type local machine — that for a half-century had been the embodiment of Samuel Gompers's admonition to "reward your friends and punish your enemies."

What spurred the CIO, itself a child of President Roosevelt's New Deal, to a belief in the essentiality of systematic, year-round political activity was a tide of anti-union sentiment in the gloomy early stages of World War II. The old-line leaders of the American Federation of Labor, no admirers of either Hillman or the CIO, spurned an invitation to become partners in the 1944 drive. But they borrowed a leaf from Hillman's book and formed a permanent apparatus of their own three years later after a postwar Congress had passed the hated Taft-Hartley Act in disregard of a scorching veto by President Truman, the man whose nomination at Chicago as Roosevelt's vice-presidential running mate had prompted the "clear it with Sidney" order.

A prime mover in the AFL policy switch was George Meany, then a "young comer" of 53 chafing under the frustrating constraints put on his activities as secretary-treasurer by the federation's octogenarian President William Green. Expertise in lobbying and politics had been the qualities most responsible for Meany's being called to the AFL fogbound headquarters in the first place — qualities reflected in the still-unmatched catalogue of pro-labor bills he got on New York State's statute books when he headed the State Federation of Labor in the mid-1930's.

THESE same qualities, honed over the years to a fine edge of skill and toughness, were principally responsible for his selection to lead the merged AFL-CIO in 1955 and for the increasing dominance he has exerted over the refused labor movement ever since. Banished was the neutralist philosophy that had caused the central organization to stand on the sidelines even after the Great Depression had snuffed out millions of jobs and Roosevelt was challenging Herbert Hoover in 1932. Labor's political energies were channeled into a potent stream through the Committee on Political Education, and it was always Meany who held the nozzle as tightly as he once held a plumber's wrench.

This long record of identification with political activism would have made Meany's decision to sit out the 1972 presidential contest singular, even if he had not been up to a few weeks ago the most vocal — and, in the opinion of many observers, most devastating — critic of President Nixon in or out of labor. What turned him to fence-sitting was no lessening of his distaste for "that stunt man" in the White House but the development of an even sharper revulsion against the man who wants to succeed him.

THE AFL-CIO chief regards Senator McGovern as an amiable but ineffectual fuzzyhead who has let the Democratic Party be captured by new left elements and a coterie of assorted crackpots. Meany's whim is law in the federation high command, so absolute that there was no serious challenge when he decided right after the Democratic convention to spike the heavy artillery and concentrate all COPE's ammunition on key congressional races.

THAT policy has left international unions free to mount independent presidential drives, alone or in concert. In that scramble the Democratic nominee is well out in front, with unions representing roughly half of the federation's 14 million members on his side. The sole union colossus in the Nixon column is the 2 million-member International Brotherhood of Teamsters, exiled from the AFL-CIO fifteen years ago. However, the President has strong, though still largely undeclared, support in the construction and maritime trades.

The last thing the pro-McGovern unionists want is to turn their political mobilization into an anti-Meany campaign, one that would goad the imperious Mr. Labor into demonstrating once again that when he waves his scepter none of the Nabobs around him can best him in battle. But total as is Meany's current control it is hard to escape the conclusion that, whether McGovern wins or falls on his face, the Meany-controlled COPE machine will never recover any semblance of its old efficiency or authority. Now that the presidents of big unions are enjoying the heady sense of running their own political circus, they will never be content to slip back into the status of side-show extras.

Bella would do Congress job same -- 'only better'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Bella Abzug, who spent her first term in Congress battling the establishment, said Sunday if she had it to do all over again, she would do it the same — "only better."

The New York Democrat, displaced by redistricting and defeated by Rep. William F. Ryan in the Democratic primary, made it clear she hopes to return to the House later.

"I think that I have a feeling for the House of Representatives and what it should be like and the kind of things that should be done here in committees and on the floor as well as the kind of leadership that should emanate from here," she said.

AND she left no doubt that she has no regrets for the aggressive style that made her one of the best-known freshman members of the 92nd Congress: "I think there should be and must be more people coming to Congress who are prepared to fight for the people they represent and the ideas and the views that are really merited of a Democracy, and not just coming here as though this is a career in which you occasionally pass a piece of legislation and make sure you'll be re-elected the next time around."

"Now that I look it over, would I have done anything differently? I say no; only better."

Mrs. Abzug also predicted that an increasing number of women would win election to Congress and other offices. The formation of the National Women's Political Caucus, she said, has led to "a tremendous acceleration of people's interest in the political arena, so that I think there will be a rising number of women coming into Congress and into the state legislatures, and in fact, into the higher levels of most institutions of government as well as in the economy itself."

SHE was scornful of members of Congress who are "hung up with their own personal political careers" or who "feel that they have to go along with the way things have been."

But she also said she found much that was good in Congress: "There is a way in which you can make this great country, as we approach the 200th anniversary, really work effectively. I've discovered that. I didn't know that."

"I think that I've discovered that many of the people here are very hard working people," she said. "I've disagreed with a good number of them; they've disagreed with me. But I think that a good number of them would act if there were those more in number who were prepared to give leadership and be prepared to go up against the machinery, the seniority, (and) to speak up instead of going along."

Coalition government favored for S. Vietnam

PRINCETON, N.J. — Forty-nine per cent of Americans feel that South Vietnam should be run by a coalition government after the withdrawal of U. S. troops, the Gallup Poll reported.

The poll, released Sunday, also said 51 per cent of those interviewed feel the United States should continue to send military aid to South Vietnam after American troops withdraw. According to the Gallup organization, opinions on the two subjects were similar among all population groups and among supporters of both President Nixon and Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern.

Even those under 30, who have been vocal on the Vietnam issue, held views that closely paralleled those for the nation as a whole, the polling organization noted.

The survey was based on interviews between Aug. 4-5, with 1,465 voting-aged persons who vote in 300 localities.

Does Meany call the vote?

By LOUIS HARRIS

By 49-40 per cent, union members across the country are inclined at the moment to prefer Richard Nixon to George McGovern for the presidency. On the surface, this would seem to say that the rank and file of labor are prepared to follow the lead of AFL-CIO President George Meany in opposing McGovern. Yet the facts simply do not bear this claim out.

When asked if they tend to agree or disagree with Meany's political point of view, union members nationwide tend to disagree with him by a 3-2 margin. When asked how Meany's opposition to McGovern might affect their attitudes toward the Democratic nominee, 10 per cent said that it made them feel more like supporting McGovern, 11 per cent said that it made them feel less like supporting him, but a sizable 71 per cent said that Meany's position just won't affect their attitudes one way or the other.

An in-depth examination of union members' attitudes on key dimensions of the 1972 election yields one basic finding: although they are more interested in economic matters than the average voter, union members differ little with most of their neighbors in their views of the candidates and on the major issues. If the union vote is to be won by either Nixon or McGovern, it is far more likely to be on the basis of the overriding issues in the campaign than through specialized appeals designed for the so-called "pork chop" vote, on the one hand, or for the so-called "hard hat" vote, on the other.

IN THIS ELECTION up to now, the union vote has tended to shift at much the same proportions and at much the same points in time as the electorate as a whole:

May	35	53	12

Back in May, the division of the union vote closely paralleled the way it went in 1968, when Humphrey received 53 per cent, Nixon 32 per cent, and Wallace 15 per cent. McGovern was ahead by a 53-35 per cent margin.

But then, as McGovern ran into increasing trouble over his credibility on his welfare plan, which in turn fed his rising reputation for being "too extreme" in his views, the union vote began switching over to President Nixon. As the Nixon nationwide lead soared to over a 20 point spread, the union vote went from 8 points Democratic to 9 points Republican. This 17 point turnaround among union members was close to the 16 point shift among voters as a whole.

Here are some of the highlights of the in-depth probing among union members over the past few months:

—Union members tend to be more absorbed with bread-and-butter issues than most voters, with 69 per cent of the trade union rank-and file singling out economic questions as most important to them, compared with 58 per cent of the public as a whole. By the same token, union members tend to be slightly less concerned about such issues as drugs, crime, welfare, and pollution than other voters.

—Members of organized labor tend to be more alienated than the average voter, particularly on economic matters. For example, although by 43-41 per cent most people think the country is finally out of a recession, union members still think the nation is in a recession by a 48-39 per cent margin. While 74 per cent of the public believes that "tax laws are written more to help the rich, rather than the average working man," a higher 81 per cent of the union rank and file feel that way.

—McGovern's best chance to make gains among union members clearly rests in the economic area. Compared with 57 per cent of the public who feel that "President Nixon is too close to big business," a much higher 66 per cent of union members feel that way.

—However, McGovern has as serious a credibility problem with union members as he has with entire electorate. By 55-26 per cent, a majority of all likely voters feel that "McGovern has too extreme liberal views," a point of view shared by 55-27 per cent among union members. Even when asked who they think would do better in checking the rising cost of living, union members prefer Nixon to McGovern by 39-29 per cent. When asked whom they would trust more in the White House, by a decisive 53-32 per cent, the rank and file of labor say they would have more confidence in the President.

ALTHOUGH THEY will undoubtedly be taking a closer look at both candidates in the remaining two months before the election, union members are far more likely to be making up their own minds than taking their cues from AFL-CIO President Meany. In early August, a cross section of 1,635 likely voters was asked: "From what you know or have heard, do you tend to agree or disagree with the political point of view of George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO?"

	Total Voters %	Union Members %
Agree with Meany	18	22
Disagree	36	33
Not Sure	46	45

Then the cross section was asked: "As you know, George Meany strongly opposed the nomination of Senator McGovern at the Democratic convention. Does Meany's opposition make you feel more like supporting McGovern, less, or doesn't it make much difference one way or the other?"

	Total Voters %	Union Members %
How Make You Feel:
More like supporting McGovern	10	10
Less like supporting	8	11
Makes no difference	73	71
Not sure	9	8

Not only is the Meany opposition to McGovern unlikely to sway many union members, but when asked how they responded to the Democratic convention, by 53-23 per cent union members were favorable.

A DASH OF RAIN

Two young girls sprint across Pine Avenue Sunday when a surprise rainstorm dumped .18 of an inch of rain on the city in a down-pour that lasted only a short time but caught most without rain gear. The warm summer rain continued as showers for most of the afternoon and the Weather Bureau predicts showers will continue today. Long Beach had the highest amount of rainfall in Los Angeles County. Rain slick streets caused a rash of minor traffic accidents.

U.S. TO SCRAP WORK PLAN

"This is definitely a step backwards. The legality of the Philadelphia Plan was upheld in Federal District Court and in the Federal Appeals Court. The Supreme Court refused to review those decisions. "President Nixon should reaffirm his support of the Philadelphia Plan and some kind of goals and guidelines to assure equitable employment of blacks. The riots of the sixties were caused by the frustration of blacks who saw that a full-employment economy meant whites were working and blacks were unemployed. The same situation is upon us again. "You can't just do routine things to hire blacks, because of the racist system. I am going to send telegrams to the President and to Sen. (George) McGovern and ask them to make clear what they mean by their opposition to quotas. I have to know what it is because a lot of black college kids are depending on my word regarding their possible employment when they graduate, and the only way they're going to be employed, the only way the cycle against them is going to be broken, is through quotas. "Fletcher was in Resion to address the fourth annual Black Arts Festival in the small community of integrated living in suburban Washington. He criticized both Nixon and McGovern for their opposition to quotas. "It is very popular this year to run against everything black Americans stand for, their hopes and aspirations," commented the former staunch defender of the administration. "Busing is a code word, which means whites don't want to have anything to do with black folks. Opposition to low-cost housing in the suburbs is a code word for the containment of blacks. "And the new code word is quotas, and it means whites don't want to see any systematic way to deal with minorities. "When I was at the Labor Department, they told me if the Philadelphia Plan won in court, they'd implement it. Well, we won, but now they're saying no, that would be imposing quotas. I and other black spokesmen can no longer tell minority people to go through the courts, and then have victory snatched away. "Fletcher was once the top black official of the Nixon administration. He inherited the Philadelphia Plan from the Johnson administration, and he pursued its enforcement with passion. This caused him problems within the administration, especially when a conscious effort was made by Republicans to win labor support. The plan, along with the hometown plans, set percentage quotas for the training and hiring of minorities, mainly blacks, in such building trades as electricians, plumbers, carpenters, bricklayers and elevator constructors. None of the plans has been regarded by objective reviewers as effective because of failure to enforce the guidelines strongly. While organized labor had bitterly opposed the plans because of the quotas, the issue was not a major political controversy until President Nixon and Sen. McGovern were urged by the American Jewish Committee to oppose all quota systems for the hiring of minorities. The President responded by issuing a proclamation banning such quotas, while McGovern said he was against quotas.

est of the public can be reflected in the outcome as well as the process of collective bargaining. At the same time, the President said, "we believe that when government tampers too much with the lives of individuals, when it unnecessarily butts into the free collective bargaining process, it cripples the private enterprise system on which the welfare of the worker depends. "This election year, Nixon said, poses the choice between the "work ethic that built this nation's character and the new welfare ethic that could cause that American character to weaken. "The work ethic holds it wrong to expect instant gratification of all our desires, he said, and the welfare ethic says the "good life can be made available to everyone right now." Human nature favors the work ethic's rejection of redistributing income, Nixon said. And rather than the welfare ethic's preoccupation with how to cut up the pie we have, the work ethic's solution is "to make a bigger pie." Well-intentioned people, refusing to recognize the realities of human nature, the President said, are the advocates of involuntary busing of school children away from their neighborhoods for the purpose of achieving racial balance. "We have come a long way in the past four years in ending segregation in this country... without the riots... bitterness... hatred that plagued this nation during the sixties

Shriver defends LBJ care plans

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Democratic vice presidential nominee Sargent Shriver Sunday defended health and welfare programs initiated during former President Lyndon B. Johnson's "Great Society" administration. Shriver criticized statements made recently by Charles E. Walker, deputy secretary of the U. S. Treasury, calling for a cutback in such programs as manpower training.

"George McGovern and Sargent Shriver believe that is exactly where the money should be spent, where the under secretary of the Treasury says we are wasting it," Shriver said.

The candidate, here to shore up flagging support for the McGovern-Shriver ticket, said at a meeting with top state Democratic leaders the Nixon administration was also reluctant to spend money to bolster benefits for coal miners.

He said GOP Senators John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky and Minority Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania had to "beg" President Nixon to sign recent amendments to black lung legislation. The black lung issue was considered critical in coal states such as West Virginia.

Spock calls for control of factories by local people

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dr. Benjamin Spock, presidential candidate of the small, left-wing People's Party, called Sunday for local control of industry by "those who work in the plants and those who live in the communities the plants serve." "People need to gain control over their lives and all too many workers — blue collar and white collar alike — are victims of jobs which bore and dehumanize them," Spock said as the party issued a position paper on jobs and employment. The position paper, written by Aretha Wiley, a labor consultant who holds the title of secretary of labor in Spock's "shadow cabinet," called for "rethinking the whole concept of work and working." "Unfortunately, freedom now stops at the plant gate or office door," the paper said. "Freedom of speech, press, assembly, the right to be judged by peers are supposedly inalienable yet they are not recognized on the job. "Workers should elect their own supervisors and set their own rules," the paper said. "Rather than being taught to do one assembly line ask, workers should be trained in all aspects of production. They should share equally the pleasant and the repugnant chores and work in small work teams." Self-management by workers, civil liberties on the job and "humanizing work" may be against the "prevailing business drive for maximal profits," the paper said. "But society is ready to enter a new phase of industrialization where the needs of people — both as workers and consumers — come before the desire for profits." A People's Party spokesman said the Spock ticket is presently on the ballot in 14 states and predicted it will have achieved ballot status in 20 to 30 states before the November election.

Smog comes to Palm Springs
The browning of the dream

PALM SPRINGS — When David McDonald, a former steelworkers' union head who helped clean up the smoky skies of Pittsburgh in 1948 moved to this drowsy desert spa it was like a breath of fresh air. And Marlo Lewis, one time producer of television's Ed Sullivan and Sgt. Bilko shows, thought the skies would never again be cloudy and gray when he moved here from New York five years ago. Petroleum engineer Louis Taubman, who uprooted his family from the Tulsa, Okla., flatlands a dozen years ago, thought Palm Springs would ensure a remaining lifetime of "the most beautiful view the human eye has ever seen" from his hillside home. Now in hot summer evenings McDonald, Lewis and Taubman gloomily contemplate a photochemically colored orange sun sinking slowly into the West through a blanket of dirty haze. Smog has come to Palm Springs, to the dismay of singer Frank Sinatra, actor Charles Farrell and others who come here largely to escape it. THE Spanish called this setting "the palm in the hand of God," and even as recently as several summers ago it retained its seductive air, adding Sinatra to its long list of resident celebrities after the singer unleashed a well-publicized parting shot at Hollywood's smog problem. "I was first here in 1959 and it was clear as a bell, to be corny," recalls McDonald. "When we looked at the mountains to the north and east, they were always clearly visible. Now it's a rare day they are clear and visible." Awareness of the problem sank in fully this summer when eyes began to water and smart, chests experienced tell-tale pains and coughing increased. One day this summer scientific instruments recorded the known high of .37 parts of pollutants per million parts of air. Many readings exceeded .25 through the summer. For comparison eyes burn at the .15 mark. Schoolchildren, emphysema patients and the elderly are advised to avoid the outdoors and strenuous physical activity starting at the .30 to .35 range in many communities. The source of most of the smog is the Los Angeles Basin 90 miles west. Most of it is produced there by automobile and truck exhausts and is funneled to Palm Springs through the mountain pass. "You can see the smog flow like gas into the city — a dirty filthy wall of brown air — in the late afternoon on many summer days," grumbles Lewis. "It comes at us like a big tidal wave." LEWIS, a director of Charles Farrell's exclusive Racquet Club, is one of three residents on the posh Tamarisk Country Club golf course. The other two are Sinatra and comedian Red Skelton. Bob Hope lives nearby. Lewis has helped start an organization called "Desert Peoples United" to fight the smog. Lewis is utilizing his publicity skills in their campaign, while McDonald, the group's president, is organizing members at $1 minimum a head. He claims a membership of 1,000 and predicts 5,000 to 10,000 members shortly. Officials acknowledge that smog afflicts Palm Springs on many hot summer afternoons and they're desperately trying to do something. "Smog?" said City Manager Frank Aleshire. "We're against it." As for "Desert Peoples United," "We're all for them," Taubman said he believes "that smog can be solved." "The best publicity that could possibly come out is for the world to know that Palm Springs is trying to solve the problem and not let it get worse," Taubman added.

Pilot leader targets hijacker sanctuaries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The President of the Air Line Pilots Association (ALPA) said Sunday the United States should deny landing rights to the air carriers of nations which harbor airplane hijackers.

The official, John J. O'Donnell, said the most important need in the anti-hijacking campaign was "the elimination of sanctuaries around the world."

O'Donnell appeared on a television panel show on the eve of a two-week, 17-nation conference starting here today to draft an international accord carrying sanctions against countries that fail to prosecute or extradite hijackers or promptly return passengers and crews of hijacked aircraft.

"It's only a matter of time until some catastrophe occurs if we don't stop hijacking," he said.

"Some of the Arab states are encouraging hijacking. Some of these nations are bases of revolution around the world. Some have training programs to train hijackers."

"It's going to require us to boycott them."

Another panelist, President Stuart G. Tipton of the Air Transport Association of America, said the boycott should be used as a last resort.

James Murphy, director of the Federal Aviation Administration's division of air transport security, said the best place to thwart a hijacking was on the ground.

"The profile is the spinal column of our system," Murphy said. Airlines have distributed to employees dealing with passengers a list of characteristics that might indicate possible intent to hijack.

TIPTON said use of the profile "has thwarted many hijackings." Air piracy, he said, was "a very poor way, and a very dangerous way of making a living. And it's going to get less and less successful."

O'Donnell also called for mandatory search of carry-on luggage.

"I'd like to see no carry-on luggage," Murphy said, except for milk, formula and diapers that mothers need for their babies.

The international conference will be opened by U.S. Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe, who announced Saturday that foreign airlines will be required to conform to the same security rules as U.S. carriers when operating in and out of U.S. airports.

THE legal subcommittee of the International Civil Aviation Organization will draft calling for sanctions against countries which do not observe terms of international anti-hijacking conventions.

The draft pact would establish an international commission to investigate hijacking incidents.

Attack aboard jet jails passenger

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gerald T. Jeffers, 39, remained lodged in Allegheny County Jail Sunday on a variety of charges in an alleged altercation with an airline stewardess on a commercial flight from Los Angeles, authorities said.

U.S. Marshal John Lellock said Jeffers, a paint factory worker from Los Angeles, was arrested Saturday at Greater Pittsburgh International Airport shortly after Trans World Airlines Flight 16 touched down.

Arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Robert C. Mitchell on charges of interfering with a member of a flight crew, assaulting a stewardess and indecent exposure, Jeffers was taken to the county jail in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Lellock said Jeffers stepped from a restroom aboard the plane as the aircraft was making its landing approach at the airport and allegedly exposed himself to stewardess Eileen Connole.

Jeffers grabbed Miss Connole by the throat, Lellock said, as she attempted to persuade the suspect to return to the toilet.

The man was subdued by two flight crew members and two male passengers shortly after the plane touched down.

Lellock said he and an Allegheny County policeman boarded the aircraft after it taxied to its parking space and arrested Jeffers.

Authorities said Jeffers told them he was returning to his parents' home in nearby Washington County, after living in California for the past five years.

A hearing was set for Sept. 11.

Blacks hear call for worldwide political alliance

By EVERETT B. HOLLES
New York Times Service

SAN DIEGO — A call for a political alliance of the world's 600 million Negroes Sunday was greeted by a swelling chant of "Umoja Mweusi" — Swahili for Black Unity — among 2,500 militants attending the Second International Congress of African People.

Black poet and playwright Leroi Jones, who has adopted the Swahili name Imamu Amiri Baraka, touched off the Pan African demonstration when he told delegates that if they and their brethren overseas worked together "we can become one of the most powerful people in the world."

"Our creation, first, of a strong national political party and then a world African party dedicated to the liberation of black people everywhere is essential to our survival and development," he said.

"On the African continent and in the Caribbean our people have developed national parties, revolutionary movements and state power. But here in America we have done neither. We cannot secure our own liberation or contribute to the development of an African world state until we maximize our Black Power, beginning at the grass roots."

Baraka, one of the organizers of this year's congress and of a similar black nationalist conference in Atlanta two years ago, said the Pan African goal is to build a political institution in each African Nation to put its candidates in office, oppose white "Balkanization" of blacks, make alliances and coalitions and "fight wars where necessary."

One day, he added, these institutions will be able to link up to form a world African party and the full liberation of all blacks will be possible.

The theme of the four-day congress, which ends today, is black unity, but a lack of unity among black leaders for the idea of a separate political party was evident. The 12-member Black Congressional Caucus has boycotted the congress, as have leaders of the NAACP and other civil rights organizations.

Speakers included Owusu Sadaukai, president of Malcolm University in Greensboro, N.C.; Roy Innis, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality; Imamu Sukumu of the National Involvement Association; Joe Waller of the Pan African National Organization and C. L. R. James, the West Indian author who is known as the father of Pan Africanism.

Taking part in the congress are a half dozen black political leaders from the African continent representing the Tanganyikan African Nationalist Union, the Democratic Party of Guinea, and the Front for the Liberation of Zimbabwe (Rhodesia).

The work of seven workshop sessions here was based, almost entirely, on the controversial 55-page "political agenda" adopted at the Black Political Convention held in Gary, Ind., in March.

The Gary agenda was repudiated by the Black Congressional Caucus which countered by drafting its own more moderate Black Bill of Rights. The NAACP also rejected the agenda, whose demands include the right of blacks in the South to hold plebiscites to determine whether they want to break away and become part of a "Republic of New Africa" or "remain under the captivity sovereignty of the United States."

Black communities would be permitted to become separate political entities and, under a proposed socialistic transformation of the American economic system, blacks would be paid reparations out of the assets of the national economy for "the horrors of slavery and the human indignities visited upon them."

A constitutional amendment would be sought to require a minimum of 66 black representatives and 15 senators in the congress, to be elected at large by black Americans.

Nixon action asked on exiled Asians

NEW YORK — Rep. Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y., said Sunday he has sent letters to Secretary of State William Rogers and Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst urging the Nixon administration to admit 5,000 Asian Ugandans to this country under its emergency powers without regard to immigration quotas.

"It's apparent that the Ugandans have adopted the worst kind of racism as official policy and decided that Asians are 'inferior,'" Koch said in a statement. "By offering to accept 5,000 of these people, we hopefully will set an example for other countries to do the same."

The Manhattan congressman pointed out that former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell had invoked his special parole authority to admit Soviet Jews who were able to leave the USSR and wished to come here.

Brown Power showing its muscle, says early leader

By MARTIN WALDRON
New York Times Service

EL PASO — A Texas revolutionary who led an uprising of Mexican-Americans five years ago said Sunday that a fledgling Brown Power political movement was already showing its worth.

Reies Lopez Tijerina, a Baptist minister from San Antonio who now resides in Albuquerque, N.M., said that proof of Brown Power lies in the furor that has followed the slaying last Wednesday of a Colorado Mexican-American on his way to El Paso to attend the first national convention of La Raza Unida — the United People Party.

Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee, his vice presidential running mate Sargent Shriver, and Lt. Gov. Robert Mondragon of New Mexico are among the officials who are demanding a federal investigation of the slaying of Robert Falcon, 27-years-old, who was shot to death by a service station manager at Orogrande, N.M.

"The Anglos are saying, 'Uh oh, the Mexicans didn't get that mad 20 years ago when we shot them down like dogs and nobody said a thing about it,'" said the 46-year old Tijerina. "Today, this murder is on the front page of every paper in the country."

TIJERINA, who in late 1966 and 1967 led a band of insurgents that seized a United States park in New Mexico and raided the courthouse in Tierra Amarilla, N.M., was a special guest at La Raza Unida's national convention, which bogged down Sunday in arguments over the party's platform and strategy.

Many of the 428 official delegates wanted to endorse McGovern for president, but party leaders, including the chairman, Jose-Angel Gutierrez of Crystal City, Tex., and Rodolfo Gonzalez, the head of a Colorado Chicano movement, fought against such an endorsement.

Gonzalez referred to the Democratic and Republican parties as "a monster with two heads that eats from the same trough."

"The only results for the Chicano have come from our movement, our marches and our martyrs," he said.

Gutierrez, who founded La Raza Unida in Crystal City in 1969, said that the new party should not become involved in presidential level politics until it has been able to consolidate its gains at the state and local levels.

LA RAZA UNIDA has been most active in Texas. This year, it is running candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, the state railroad commission and the state Legislature as well as for local offices. The party in 1970 elected officials in 22 Texas counties. Gutierrez himself was elected president of the County School Board in Crystal City.

The party is also sponsoring candidates in Colorado, California, Arizona and New Mexico and, said Gutierrez, is thinking of entering District of Columbia politics.

By 1976, he said, the party hopefully will be strong enough to present its own presidential slate.

There are official delegates from 18 states, with Texas and California, which have the most Mexican-Americans in the country, dominating the convention.

Thus far at the convention, party leaders have been stressing the need for unity while they themselves have been jockeying for positions of power in the new political organization.

Gutierrez has kept control up until now, but some factions are pushing Gonzalez to run the party.

Many of the 1,500 delegates to the convention, who were not authorized to vote, were urging Mexican-Americans to go to Orogrande, N.M., where Falcon was shot, and demonstrate in the coming week. The idea, however, was not approved at the top level of the convention.

The service station manager accused of shooting Falcon, Perry Brunson, has been charged with manslaughter.

Chicano law 'watchdog' to probe Raza leader death

PHOENIX (UPI) — The shooting of a Chicano leader in New Mexico last week will be the first case considered by the National Chicano Institute on law and justice.

The institute was created Saturday at the conclusion of a three-day conference attended by about 300 Mexican-Americans from around the nation. Conference chairman Mario Obledo said the institute "will be a permanent body charged with an overview of the law and of law reform projects."

Obledo said the first "watchdog" case will be the investigation of the fatal shooting of Richard Falcon at a service station in Oro Grande, N.M., last week. Falcon was shot en route to El Paso, Tex., to attend the Raza Unida Party convention, to which he was a delegate from Colorado.

Kenneth Padilla of Denver, associate counsel for the Mexican-American Legal Defense Fund, told the conference Falcon's alleged slayer was released without bail. "This is an epitome of the inequities that exist," he said.

Obledo said the new institute will consider such issues as lack of Chicano judges and attorneys and "elective standards" for setting bail. He said the institute did not intend initially to become involved in formal court action, but would operate as a monitoring agency on questions of justice involving Chicanos.

KKK out to recruit young

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — There is a nationwide drive to get teen-agers to join the Ku Klux Klan, says James R. Venable, Imperial Wizard of the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

"We're making a drive to get lots of teen-agers," Venable told newsmen at the annual Labor Day KKK rally held during the weekend at Stone Mountain near here.

"We're trying to get them indoctrinated to Americanism," he said. Recently, in Ohio, Venable said, "We took in over 200 teen-agers."

Venable said the Klan "has over 81,000 people and that is a conservative figure."

Venable's group isn't as large as the United Klans of America, headed by Alabama's Robert Shelton.

Much of the reported Klan growth is in northern states, such as Ohio and Michigan, the leader said.

About 200 klansmen and women from around the United States gathered for the rally. Instead of the traditional white bed sheets, most, including a sizeable number of young persons, wore finely tailored satin robes.

Youth dragged across border

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Mexican youth who appeared to have been tortured, was dragged across the international border and dumped in the United States Sunday, police said.

The unidentified youth was listed in serious condition at University Hospital with burns on his face, neck and feet, said Detective Frank Schaefer.

Witnesses in Mexico said they saw a pair of men drag the youth, who appeared to be 15 to 21-years-old, across the border.

HEALTH NEWS... Back Surgery—Still Suffering?

The question, "Why are so many low back surgeries unsuccessful?" was recently put to Dr. Lowell E. Ward, a prominent Long Beach Chiropractic Orthopedist.

"This question may involve many things," replied Dr. Ward.

"However, one of the most outstanding problems is that so often the site of the surgery is a distant effect, while the actual cause arises from a different area of the spine."

Thus, according to Dr. Ward, "The repair of an effect does not alter or correct the real causative problem."

"There is a name for a problem such as this," claimed Dr. Ward. "It is called a 'radicular syndrome,' or a problem in one area of the spine causing another problem far remote — or in fact, a target problem elsewhere."

Dr. Ward then continued by stating that many people ask him, "But if my low back problem was being caused by something somewhere else in my spine, wouldn't I feel that?"

Dr. Ward categorically denied that this was necessarily so. "In fact, a low back surgery can result from an injury such as a whiplash to another area of the spine which was actually damaged but never felt by the patient. And, in many instances, the injury took place years prior to the low back surgery."

"I feel," confides Dr. Ward, "that the spine must be considered as a unitized organ. Successful treatment must relate the entire unit from top to bottom. When the spine has a problem, seldom is it just low back, mid-back or neck. More than usual, it is a problem that is significantly related to all three areas."

"But how can a problem in my neck cause a slipped or deteriorated disc in my low back?" a layman asked. "Simple," relates Dr. Ward. "You have a cable of nerves running from the brain to the lower back, passing through the neck area of the spine first, therefore problems such as limited neck motion, neck displacement, neck injury, etc., affect the spinal cord or nerve cable that carry the brain messages to the low back."

"Problems in the neck may, in fact, create diseases anywhere within the body because of this fact."

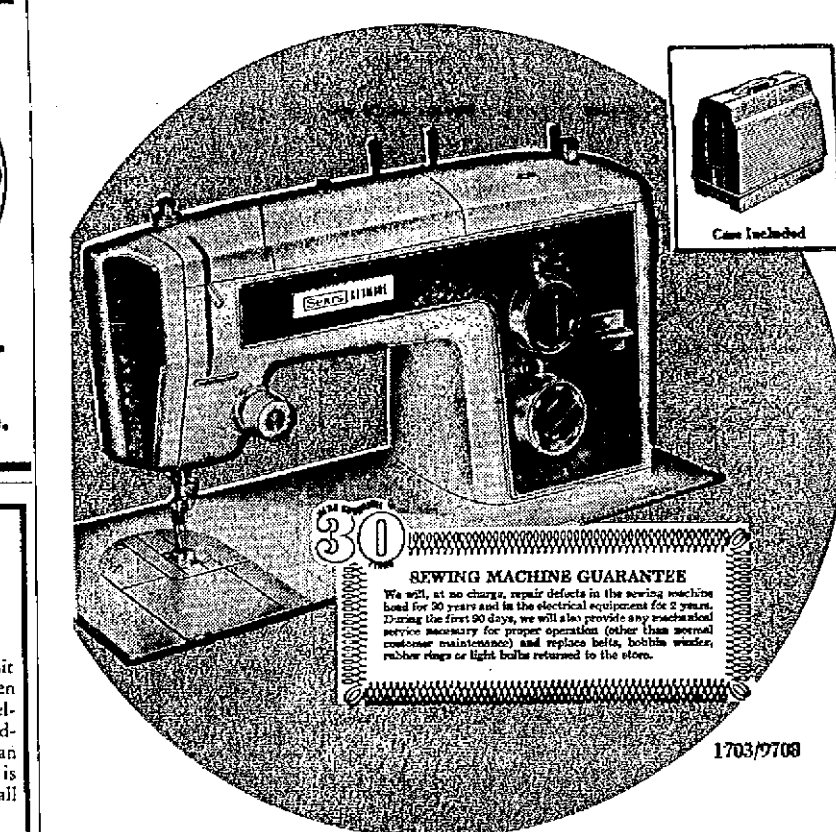

"Frequently," continues Dr. Ward, "I find that in so many patients, their neck has been giving problems all along. Many display minor and easily overlooked symptoms such as a slight headache, dizziness, limited range of movement, slight pains, grating noises, stiffness, slight soreness, eye strain or even fatigue."

Dr. Ward's advice to people who have had back surgery, is this, "If you are still suffering after back surgery, be examined thoroughly by a Doctor of Chiropractic. His specialty is resolving problem back cases. His treatment is very easy and gentle and will be well adapted to your particular need."

Dr. Ward maintains his offices at 3535 East Seventh St., Long Beach, telephone: 433-0444.

IT'S...IT'S PRETTY HOT FOR CHASIN' ME, MR. WILSON. I'LL WALK IF YOU WILL.

Forecast for Tuesday

You do now. Impractical ideas, experiments create momentary confusion. Schedules need double-checking.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Planned and promised attendance, assistance may not be there, or it may be late. Do the proper thing, without recommitment.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 22): Progress is slow, but if you stick to one detail at a time, you'll get it all settled before pushing on to the next.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): Hard times await you, whether you're getting into a new spot or returning to an old one. Put yourself together as well as you can.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Details pile up and may become confused in the push to get something settled. Be sure you really know what it all means.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can't have everything all the time and this is one of those times when something gets left out. Review your schedule.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): For something you've worked and waited for over a long time, another day may improve the getting. Discussion is needed.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Work tends to unfoldness, associates differ. It's up to you to keep the peace and get the work into its right tracks.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Emotions dominate the day, hinder progress. Channel yours into some constructive application, take the most difficult chore and get it done.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Seems nobody is quite satisfied with anything, and you can ride out the storm quite simply by seeing the humor of it. Be alert.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Getting back to normal involves settling petty differences, sincerely. Make a list of completed items so nothing is skipped.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends and money mix but not to your advantage. Keep them apart in your discourse. Significant purchases are best deferred.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Care is important in anything

'Orgy at 10 tonight'--but little came of it

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

WINDSOR, England (U.P.)—The guide books haven't caught up yet, but there's a new scene, man, at Britain's top tourist attraction. Like at night, any night, a sliver of a harvest moon rides high over the towers and turrets of Windsor Castle. The summer wind pulses with the ominous beat of tom-toms, the twang of electric guitars and a lion's melancholy roar. Around a great bonfire under the ancient oaks, her majesty's spaced-out subjects dance naked in the moonlight.

"Orgy at 10 tonight," cries out a voice from the forest vastness.

"Aw, shut up," comes the answer, "or you'll have the pigs down on us again."

Not since William the Conqueror brought the royalty to roost here on the banks of the Thames has Windsor Great Park witnessed such a way-out scope.

FOR MORE than a week now, the freaks have been camping out in the queen's backyard, tenting together in defiance of park regulations under the faded green and pink flag of something called "The People's Republic."

"Don't fancy being called hippies anymore—freaks is the better word," advised Nicky, no last name, recumbent in beads and Indian war paint on a rolled up sleeping bag. Nicky, who confesses to having worked three months in the past five years, was busy writing a letter to Queen Elizabeth, without benefit of pencil or paper.

"I'm suggesting," he dictated his thoughts to an imaginary secretary in between drags on a sweet smelling cigarette, "that she turn this crown land over to the people, inasmuch as they own it anyway, and let us have a permanent commune here. You know, like Yondel Park in Amsterdam."

About him in berets, bangles, floppy hats and fringed jackets sprawled less than a hundred fellow freaks, the last remnants of the Great Windsor Pop and Sex Festival that was supposed to attract a million hippies from all over Europe but never really got off the ground because park police refused to let performing rock groups plug in their amplifiers.

"TODAY they make us take down our tents, but we're staying on even if it is bloody cold at night," said Judy, from Harrogate College in Yorkshire, popping what appeared to be a smear of wet sawdust into her mouth. It turned out to be something called "muesli," a cold concoction of oats, raisins and peanuts that, along with an unidentified stew, is the main staple in the diet of the leaderless legions camped out on a hillside overlooking the largest inhabited castle in the world.

"We call the camp Windsor Castle Annex, or just 'here,' because here is where it's at," Judy explained. "There's no government of any kind, no leader, although there is a people's spokesman who calls meetings and the blokes from the White Panther party, a sort of revolutionary group, who organize the soup kitchen and see to the cleanup."

The hillside facing the castle was covered with reclining figures, smoking, meditating, gazing off in the distance, bundled under blankets, but it was hardly a hubbub of activity.

"Somebody announced an orgy for 10 last night," Judy recalled, but nothing happened. Just a lot of singing and tom-toms. All this sex on the grass you hear about isn't so. There's some free-lance stuff going on, but most of the girls have boyfriends with them."

TOPELESS in the bright September sunshine, a brunette named Pussy, from Bristol, watched a thin line of campers head off to Windsor town for a sack of oats and some onions along the celebrated long walk that Charles II laid out.

"Copper tried to bust me yesterday for nakedness, but I had me knickers (panties) on," said Pussy, "so he just said, 'hey, you with the spectacles and no bra, you're not allowed to build fires here.'"

The campsite has no fresh water, no sanitation facilities, and now that the last portable generator has gone dead, no power source to spark the electric guitars.

Virginia Water, a spectacular artificial lake four miles away, is used for illegal, early morning wash-ups. After dark, deer prowl about in the great park surrounding the castle, and the night wind brings the sounds and smells of lions from the nearby safari park.

"Wish one of those lions would get loose," mused Jo, with a gleam in her eye, partly caused by liberal applications of silver paint on the lids. "We'd get him spaced out to his skin."

SHOPKEEPERS in Windsor and neighboring Eton keep a wary eye for ripoffs by shopping parties from the campsite, but most have proved surprisingly sympathetic. One showed up one day with a big box of sandwiches. Another completely sold out the supply of cigarette papers he had been trying to get rid of for years but was still puzzled.

"Can't understand for the life of me what they do with them," he mused across the generation gap. "We're not really stealing," a South African named Spam explained the People's philosophy of commerce. "Shopkeepers are only engaged in keeping what is yours already and selling it back to you."

A Dane, three Frenchmen, a German and a few American blacks with names like "Tennessee" and "Cowboy" round out the international quarter.

Six hundred police from surrounding towns and villages originally turned out to wink benignly at park regulations against camping overnight, building fires, bathing in the lake and parading topless in the vicinity of known lions. Now only the local force remains.

"The dope squad from Reading busted a couple of kids yesterday," confided Sonja. "It was a giggle. They tried to dress like hippies but you could smell them a mile away. Who ever heard of hippiness in Hawaiian shirts. There's a bit of acid about, but the kids were clean."

The royal family assembled at Windsor Castle on Saturday for the funeral of Prince William of Gloucester, who was killed in an air race last Monday.

Italian to imitate Marco Polo's trip

VENICE, Italy (U.P.)—Seven centuries after Marco Polo's historic trip to China, another Italian is set to ride to Peking.

Carlo Mauri, an alpinist and explorer, will try to follow the same route, the mythical Road of Silk, and use the same means of transportation—horses. Mauri's trip should take a year.

In 1271, Marco Polo brought to Peking a message from the Pope for the Chinese ruler. Mauri will take a golden replica of a lion—a symbol of this Italian lagoon city—to China's Communist authorities.

The Italian was given the gift lion Sunday during the yearly regatta celebrating the past splendors of Venice when it was a powerful seafaring republic.

This ceremony marked the formal departure of Mauri, whose overland travels will really start from the Turkish town of Ayas at the end of the month.

MARCO POLO, who traveled to China with his father Nicolo and his uncle Matteo, started from the same place. Mauri based his route on the descriptions of one of the first trips by Europeans to China that Polo handed down in his book "Il Milione."

Riding through Turkey and Iran, Mauri will reach the Persian Gulf to sail to the Iranian Island of Hormuz. This will be the only distance covered by ship. "Polo did the same," Mauri said. "But from Hormuz on, the whole trip will be by horse. After crossing Afghanistan and various Himalayan passes at last we will reach China. It is easy to say but the whole trip should take one year."

Mauri, who crossed the Atlantic in a papyrus boat as a member of Norwegian navigator Thor Heyerdahl's Ra II crew, will be accompanied on the China trip by his son, Luca, 14, and Ermanno di Carlo, 33, a horse expert.

"WE WILL travel as far as possible from roads and towns. We want to keep away from modernity and progress," Mauri said.

He expects to face problems in the Himalayan passes: "It will be hard to ride on an almost invisible mule-track at 5,000 meters (16,400 feet)"—and because of the lack of supply points for horses—"we will certainly find gasoline stations but no stables."

Ideally, Mauri's son will be Marco Polo since the Venetian explorer was the same age as Luca when he left for China, where he then lived for 17 years.

"I decided to take my son and a friend along just to form the same trio as the Polos. It will be a trip into the past and into the unforeseeable," Mauri said.

Antiwar left irksome to U.S. in Japan

Tanaka sees new role for Japan

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka returned Sunday from his summit meeting with President Nixon and told a cheering airport audience that "the Japanese-American relationship gradually has entered a new stage."

"While cooperating," Tanaka said, "the two countries should carry out an allocation of their roles in the peace and prosperity of Asia and the Pacific."

Tanaka emphasized Japan's growing economic influence and promised a stepped-up volume of Japanese economic aid and cooperation with Asia's developing countries.

Tanaka and Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ohira returned from the two-day meeting in Honolulu aboard a special jetliner.

A CROWD of about 3,000, mostly supporters in the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party, welcomed them with three traditional Japanese "bansai" cheers.

Ohira said in an airport statement that Japan will "go forward" with a policy of correcting her huge trade imbalance with the United States, which American officials estimated might go as high as $3.8 billion this year.

However, he said there were no working-level discussions at Honolulu on how this would be done.

"If the imbalance of international payments continues, the international currency structure will be cracked," Ohira said. "So we should go forward with a policy of correcting the payments balance."

OHIRA said he had asked for American understanding of Japan's policy for coming to terms with China and breaking diplomatic ties with Nationalist China. The final communique emphasized that the United States will not oppose it.

Tanaka was expected to visit Peking either late this month or early next in hopes of making relations with China more normal.

Ohira did not mention the U.S.-Japan mutual security treaty, which was reaffirmed at Honolulu, in his airport statement. He said, however, that American policy in Asia "is a thing of keeping faith with her various promises to friendly countries."

New York Times Service

TOKYO — Several seemingly trivial incidents in which Japanese leftists stopped the movement of American military tanks here have caused American authorities to become noticeably impatient with the continued harassment and the apparent reluctance of the Japanese government to provide the protection that would allow American forces to move equipment unimpeded.

There have been harassing incidents around American bases here for years. But American officials have tried to smooth them over on the ground that the United States needed those bases to maintain its military posture in East Asia.

Now, however, American military officers and government officials have begun to question, in discussions among themselves and with Japanese officials, whether American bases here can be sustained in an unpredictable and possibly hostile environment, or whether it is worth the military, political and economic costs.

The most troublesome of the recent incidents started in early August when a small group of Japanese leftists planted themselves across a road in Yokohama, Japan's major seaport, and prevented a convoy of trailers carrying five tanks from reaching the port area from which the tanks were reportedly to have been shipped to Vietnam.

After a 47-hour standoff, American authorities ordered the tanks returned to a repair depot at Sagami-hara, west of Tokyo and Yokohama. There they sit, awaiting the resolution of a legal and political tangle that has developed since.

The Army has been moving tanks and other heavy equipment from Sagami-hara for years without problems. Then, last April, Japanese traffic laws were revised to lighten restrictions on oversized loads. Even so, American forces were permitted to continue shipments.

It took the leftists to turn the traffic laws into a political issue. Once they held up the shipment, the mayor of Yokohama, Ichio Asakata, a socialist, noted that the Americans had not applied for the proper permits and might be endangering old bridges with the heavy loads. He said he would not issue permits in the future.

The unresolved legal issue is whether the U.S. security treaty with Japan, and its supplementary agreements, which give the Americans the right to free access to their bases, take precedence over Japanese traffic laws.

A spokesman for the Japanese foreign ministry said that the Japanese government was doing its best to resolve that issue. He said Japan intended to uphold United States rights to move equipment from bases here but that the government also intended to see that the traffic laws were obeyed.

No one on either side was able to predict when that issue would be resolved. Premier Kakuei Tanaka's new administration has been handling the issue gingerly, apparently because it does not want to take on a political issue while it is trying to adopt new policies toward the United States, China and the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, Japanese leftists, elated and somewhat surprised at the ease of their success in Yokohama, have harassed American military operations elsewhere. A small group of professed Communists prevented three Marine tanks from entering a firing range on the slopes of Mount Fuji one day recently and another group delayed a firing drill the following day by lighting a fire nearby.

Moreover, Japanese labor unions, some of them under leftist influence, have threatened to stop material sent from Vietnam and to refuse to work on shipments intended for Vietnam. American bases here are almost totally dependent on Japanese labor for their operations.

Beyond the immediate issue, American authorities here pointed out that U.S. bases in Japan are losing their military value because of the Nixon Doctrine, which would place first-line responsibility for security matters in the hands of Asian nations.

In addition, the Nixon administration has been moving toward detente with China and the Soviet Union, an effort that the administration hopes will lessen the likelihood of a military confrontation in Asia.

Further, the United States continues to suffer from a worrisome deficit in its balance of international payments, a major cause of which is the continued expenditure to maintain military forces abroad.

Viet duty seen for Enterprise

TOKYO (UPI) — The Asahi newspaper said Sunday that the carrier USS Enterprise, the world's largest fighting ship, was being readied for duty off Vietnam.

Asahi said in a front page story that its information came from sources in Japan's Defense Facilities Agency, which is responsible for the upkeep of bases for Japanese and American forces in Japan.

The report said the Enterprise was being loaded in San Diego and probably would sail directly to Vietnam to join the U.S. 7th fleet. It was not expected in Japan en route. (The ship is at Alameda Naval Air Station for maintenance.)

The paper called the nuclear-powered carrier, which was deployed off Korea after the capture of the USS Pueblo and its crew by North Korea in 1968 and more recently in the Indian Ocean during the Indo-Pakistan war, the "symbol of American sea supremacy."

Socialists win in Cambodia election

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Radio Phnom Penh announced Sunday evening that the pregovernment Social Republican Party scored an impressive victory in partial results of the day's National Assembly Election.

In the only Phnom Penh district where the People's Party contested, the Social Republican party pulled in 87 per cent of the vote, the government station reported.

The People's Party pulled in 10 per cent in the voting at Chhri Changwar Island, across the Tonle Sap River from the main section of the capital.

RUNNING unopposed in 53 of the 61 voting districts, the government party ran up an even bigger percentage in Kirirum, a mountainous district 50 miles southwest of Phnom Penh. Out of 815 registered voters, 811 voted for the Social Republican Party, the radio reported. Kirirum is occupied by enemy forces and out of the reach of Phnom Penh authorities. Presumably the announced votes were cast by refugees from the locality.

Two opposition parties cited the government's assignment of two representatives to be elected from that district as an example of what made them withdraw from the legislative contest.

At military installations where soldiers were marched through polls turnout was high. At the military subdivision of Takhman, eight miles south of Phnom Penh, 498 of 498 registered voters cast their ballots, an official said. All were for the Social Republican Party.

Turnout was lower in civilian voting booths. An Associated Press poll watcher said in polling places near President Lon Nô's home only 400 out of 1,979 registered citizens voted.

THE WATCHER said many voters did not enter the voting booth to cast secret ballots but simply dropped the only available ballot with insignia of the government party into the box.

This procedure was also followed by President Nô when he voted.

Many voters said they did not know the names of representatives they were

U.S. pullout from Viet called farce by Pravda

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda charged Sunday American withdrawal of ground troops from South Vietnam was a "propagandistic farce" because air and naval forces in neighboring states and waters simultaneously were being increased.

"The tendencies of international life are forcing international adventurers to modify their tactics," Pravda wrote in its weekly news review. "One such was advertised by Washington as a reduction in the number of ground electing. These were not specified on the ballot, which had only a symbol and slogan of the Social Republican Party.

One Phnom Penh voter said: "I do not know them. They never came to show themselves here."

The government made efforts for a maximum turnout. Movie theaters were closed and sale of alcoholic beverages was prohibited on election day. Sound trucks roamed the capital's streets urging people to go to polls.

A poll watcher said several voters told him they were more concerned with the skyrocketing price of rice than with having representatives.

Officials reported there were no terrorist incidents to mar the day except for "a little shooting down in Saang." Saang is 30 miles south of Phnom Penh.

IT WAS the country's first legislative election since October 1966. The Social Republican Party, whose strongman is Col. Lon Nô, brother of President Nôl, was unopposed for 118 of the 125 seats. The People's Party entered 10 candidates. Two major opposition parties withdrew in August in protest against the electoral law, which they charged favored the government group.

An official at one voting place in the rustic Chhri Cahngwar Island said that about 50 of 355 registered voters had cast their ballots. This turnout was lower than the June 4 presidential election, the official said.

At two voting places the People's Party was represented by young workers of a government newspaper, where one of the candidates works.

Although party officials said it's a progressive group, observers label it a puppet party in which Col. Nô pulls the strings.

One capital resident said officials visited him at his home Saturday evening to urge him to vote and handed him a registration card.

HE SAID that in the June presidential election, when his family wanted to vote, their names were not even on the voting list, adding: "Now they come to my house to ask me to vote."

Since last October the country has been without the National Assembly.

forces in South Vietnam by 12,000 men. It was brought home to the American voter that Pentagon soldiers no longer will die in South Vietnamese jungles.

"But behind this propagandistic farce, silence was kept about the fact that since March, the number of American servicemen waging air and naval war from bases in Thailand and Guam and from ships of the Seventh Fleet has doubled, and now totals almost 100,000 men.

"The aggressions of the Pentagon have not stopped. Only its methods are changing."

New York Times Service

ATHENS — Athens has become the United States Navy's largest home port in the Mediterranean. A squadron of six U.S. destroyers pulled into Phaleron Bay and anchored near this capital Friday.

The warships, with a complement of 1,700 men, anchored in the Athens area Friday night under a controversial arrangement between the U.S. and Greece.

Under the agreement, within the next 18 months a U.S. carrier task force with 6,700 men and 3,100 dependents will be using the area of Athens, rather than Norfolk, Va., or Newport, R.I., as a home port. The Sixth Fleet has two other, smaller home ports in the Mediterranean.

The purpose of the home-porting plan, according to the U.S. Navy is to economize by cutting down long periods of separation for Navy families, raising morale and thereby increasing the re-enlistment rate for key naval personnel.

Critics of the plan here see it as additional U.S. support for their country's military-backed govern-

2 Koreas divided on U.S. troops

SEOUL (AP) — South and North Korea, enemies for the past two decades, have moved for reconciliation through a Red Cross conference but they are far apart in their attitudes toward the American presence in the peninsula.

Newsman who returned here Saturday after covering last Wednesday's North-South Red Cross conference on family reunion in Pyongyang, held in an amicable atmosphere, report that they found anti-American slogans and posters painted all over the Communist North.

They say that among the slogans were: "Drive out American troops" and "let's strengthen anti-imperialist, anti-U.S. struggle."

One poster depicted an American soldier bayoneted by a Communist warrior and knocked down by a sledge hammer-wielding worker.

In his budget message, read Saturday to the National Assembly, South Korea's president, Chung Ilse Park declared that his government's basic security policy is to maintain and develop keeping the American troops — numbering about 40,000 — in the South.

South Koreans maintain that continued stationing of the American troops in Korea is necessary to keep peace in the peninsula. The Pyongyang regime claims the American presence has been obstructing Korean reunification.

Seoul and Pyongyang recently agreed that they should pursue national reunification by peaceful means, independent of foreign interference and by transcending ideological and political differences.

Some feel the Communists might try to use this peaceful unification without foreign interference principle as leverage to squeeze the Americans from Korea so as to weaken Seoul's position.

State boy dies in boat crash

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A Boulder City man and a California teen-ager were killed in a Lake Mead boating accident Saturday.

Another teen-ager was injured seriously during a collision of two boats in the Virgin Basin area of the lake, according to the National Park Service.

The dead were identified as Harvey Wilson, 49, of Boulder City, Nev., and James E. Jeuck, 15, of Pasadena. Injured and reported in serious condition is Diane T. Pink, 13, of Cypress.

ment, while others warn of possible nuclear hazards in time of war or of adverse social influences in peacetime — ranging from higher rents to racial problems and traffic congestion to drug addiction.

About 800 dependents of the men serving on the six destroyers now at Phaleron are expected to reach Greece Tuesday aboard the Puget Sound, a 21,000-ton destroyer tender.

The furniture and personal belongings of the 400 Navy families arrived from the East Coast aboard the Navy transport Rigel. The cargo was unloaded at Piraeus, where U.S. military aid supplies to Greece usually land.

CMDR. James Matthews, public affairs officer at the U.S. fleet support office in Phaleron, said: "When the families arrive, they will find homes. We'll provide them with listings of houses for rent in the area of Athens. They will have to go out and do the bargaining. This will not be government quarters."

U.S. Army, Air Force and Embassy families living in Athens are sponsoring the arriving Navy families to help them settle, he added. Out of the 800 dependents settling here under the first phase of home-porting, about 200 are school-age children. The commander said that school arrangements had already been made for them in existing American-community schools here.

Matthews said: "There is an important misconception about home-porting that I want to clear up. We are not building anything here. There is no naval base and there will not be naval base."

The six destroyers, he said, are a separate unit, Destroyer Squadron Twelve, under the command of Capt. John McQuestion. "Those ships are not going to be here in Athens all the time," he said. "They will be operating with the Sixth Fleet most of the time."

The destroyers are the Sampson, the Barry, the Veeland, the Richard L.

Page, the Manley and the William M. Wood. In a second home-porting phase, to be completed in 18 months, an aircraft carrier and two or three auxiliary fleet vessels will also be home-ported in the Athens area, making a task force with the six destroyers.

USSR defends Jewish policy

PARIS (AP) — A top Soviet diplomat has repudiated charges of Jewish "ransoms," declaring that a new law requiring would-be emigrants to reimburse the state for their education was necessary to stem a "brain drain" from the Soviet Union.

The Soviet ambassador to Paris, Pyotr Abrassimov, said the law applied to all persons who want to leave the Soviet Union, not only to Jews. His statement was the first official Soviet comment since the law — Decree 572 of the Council of Ministers — was passed last Aug. 2.

Abrassimov's statement, which carried full Kremlin sanction, was made in a letter dated Aug. 31 to French Socialist party leader Francois Mitterand. The letter, made public Sunday, was in response to Mitterand's letter of Aug. 25 in which the Socialist leader appealed to Abrassimov for repeal of the controversial law.

The decree has created a storm of protest in the West — particularly among Jewish communities, which charge Moscow with deciding to cash in on the rising flow of Soviet emigrants to Israel and "ransom" them to whoever will pay the price.

THE LAW requires that educated Soviets pay up to $20,000 before they can receive exit visas to emigrate. The amounts vary according to the migrant's educational level. They do not include other fees for passports and renunciation of citizenship, which amount to about $1,000.

Charging that Mitterand was a "ill-informed and meddling in Soviet internal affairs," Abrassimov said the French Socialist leader's action "had put into question" his upcoming visit to the Soviet Union this fall.

The Soviet diplomat, a member of the Soviet Communist party's ruling Central Committee, said that in proportion to their numbers Jews are two to three times better educated than other ethnic groups in the Soviet Union. "The new law applies absolutely to all Soviet citizens, regardless of their nationality," he said, adding: "Why don't you speak about discrimination against Ukrainians, Russians and Byelorussians?"

Abrassimov neglected to mention that it is far easier for a Soviet Jew to emigrate to the West today than for any other group within the Soviet borders. Current Jewish emigration rates stand at about 2,500 monthly, whereas the total amount of other emigrants from Russia is estimated to be less than 100 a month.

THE Soviet diplomat observed: "It is not only the USSR, but other countries, also, which face and respond to the problems of a brain drain."

In Moscow, foreign newsmen were given copies of a letter signed by 47 Jews protesting that the exit fees are unconstitutional and arbitrary.

"We victims of this new ruling demand the cancellation or complete review of it in accordance with common sense and justice," the letter said.

"Collection of the tax from people with a long period of service behind them amounts to paying for the same goods twice," it added.

Youngsters paint homage

By KRIS DULANEY
Staff Writer

For children, putting their impressions down on paper in words and drawings is an exercise in candor and honesty, and 38 Southern California school-age youngsters have done just that aboard the Queen Mary.

Their words may not be big, their spelling not perfect and their art not professional, but their impressions are clear in the exhibit titled "School Children's View of the Queen Mary," on display on the wall of Jacques Cousteau's Museum of the Living Sea.

Second grader Anna of the Harbor View School, Huntington Beach, says, "Your ship is prettier than the Titanic. I love the Queen Mary a lot. It's the prettiest ship in the world. And I want to marry it. Because it is beautiful."

Anna's drawing of the Queen is a collage of red, yellow, purple and orange with a bright orange sun shining above.

Classmate Bobby's rendition of the ship resembles the shape of an inverted anvil with smokestacks. Calling the Queen "very big," he says, "I went through the whole ship. She's 100 times bigger than me."

Susi, also a second grader from Harbor View, drew a figure, probably herself, steering the ship. Her view of the Queen has the helm facing toward the port, or left side, as though she were steering the ship sideways.

MOST OF the children seem preoccupied with the ship's whistle and the size of the anchor and propellers. Harbor View student Nancy says, "The whistle is so loud it can break your ear drums."

In essays, accompanied by drawings, the sixth graders of Hazard School, Santa Ana, thanked their tour guide, Paul, for leading them through the ship.

"I think you were a cool tour guide, and I think you can be a great teacher, and I've learned a lot of things about the Queen Mary," says Robert.

Kerry writes, "The thing I liked best was the propeller (sic), and the ice cube sculptor (sic). But when I went with my parents to the Queen Mary, I liked the rooms that I saw and the Queen's car."

Kerry, who says, "I myself would like to go on the Queen Mary 500 times," drew a rather colorful, striped, orange clown fish, while classmate Mindy drew a formless, white blob and labeled it the QM's ice block.

"Everything was really fascinating," she says, "especially the ice."

Lisa Baker, of the Mesa Verde School, Costa Mesa, drew a ship with square, orange portholes, while David McAlpine blended the sky and ocean into one mass of blue.

Most of the third graders' drawings from Mesa Verde are true to the scale and colors of the Queen.

SUCH IS not the case with the impressions given by students at the Ocean-side Christian School. Ages, grades or names are not listed with the fingerpaintings, which are images of the ship, cut out and pasted on top of a blue background.

Most of the black, construction paper stacks are straight up and almost twice as tall as the ship itself. Connie wrote her name on the ship.

Eight drawings from the St. Rose of Lima School, Maywood, are posted. The fourth graders drew fish underwater, the planets and a trapezoidal figure of the Queen. One student, obviously impressed with the ship's culinary aspects, drew a picture of food and labeled it "Treasure Island."

Mark Twain Elementary's first graders had varying impressions of the Queen. One student drew two fish with eggs in the foreground. Hand lettering above the drawing proclaims, "We saw films of fish. We

Hostelry tax rises tomorrow

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

Long Beach's hotel-motel room tax — a hotly disputed issue when it was first passed in 1962 — will be raised from 5 per cent to 6 per cent Tuesday. And there's likely to be a ripple of protest when it happens.

Last week, in what was probably a portent of Tuesday's scheduled vote, the councilmen gave a routine first reading to an ordinance empowering the city to assess the higher levy on hotel and motel room rentals.

Tuesday's action — the second and final reading — is expected to be about as uneventful. Hotel and motelmen have pretty well accepted the tax; and, as one of them said, "We don't pay it. We put it on the guest's tab. The public is pretty well used to it by now."

Most cities of any size have a hotel room tax, he explained. And travelers are well aware of the fact.

"As long as the tax is going to the convention bureau for promotional purposes, I don't mind it," declared Vic Manske, general manager of the Golden Sails Inn on Pacific Coast Highway. Manske, who is not opposing the new rate, said "we know it's going to benefit Long Beach through the tourist dollar."

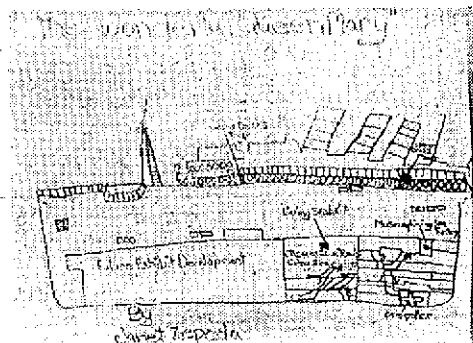

WHEN THE room tax was passed 10 years ago, it was stipulated that the money would be used to promote tourist and convention business. The policy hasn't changed.

In 1962, however — and notwithstanding the use to which the room tax revenues were to be put — the issue split the city's innkeepers into virtually warring factions. According to Manske, the Long Beach Hotel-Motel Association "busts up into two groups," and opponents of the tax formed a separate organization.

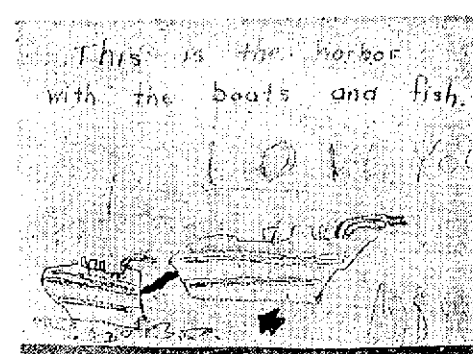

The defectors consisted mostly of outer-city hotel and motel operators, who felt they would benefit the least from additional tourist business. Some opponents also thought the tax would be an "obstacle" in booking conventions.

The spin-off group apparently no longer exists, and the city's innkeepers are now either resigned to the tax or actually in favor of it.

LBCC prof. reviews author's arrest in Mexico

By JOHN SHEELAN
Staff Writer

Mexico's hasty expulsion a week ago of the former head of the University of Southern California's Latin American studies program came as no surprise to a young Long Beach City College instructor.

"Ken Johnson has been persona non grata for a long time in Mexico," explained David Bellis, a 28-year-old political science instructor at LBCC. "And because I was his research assistant when he wrote the book that's at the bottom of this incident, I'm not welcome there either."

Dr. Kenneth Johnson, 38, was hustled out of Mexico Aug. 25 with his Argentine wife, Mercedes, and their 4-month-old daughter by interior ministry agents after being arrested and held incommunicado for more than 48 hours.

While Mexican officials denied knowledge of the incident, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said that Johnson, who has been highly critical of Mexican politics, had been put aboard a Braniff flight to San Antonio, Texas.

A Braniff spokesman confirmed that Johnson's reservations had been made by Interior Ministry agents.

"The book" Bellis referred to in an interview with the Independent Press-Telegram was "Mexican Democracy: A Critical View." Published in 1971 as a college textbook, the work received mixed reviews in the academic world.

"Democracy" was notable for two reasons," said Bellis. "It challenged the establishment theory held by American scholars that Mexico is a sleepy, tranquil nation. More importantly, it ventured where few had gone before by bluntly castigating Mexican politics and President Luis Echeverria Alvarez.

"That's forbidden in Mexico," said Bellis. "The presidente is our equivalent of mom, the flag and apple pie. Critics are swiftly and severely eliminated."

"Proof of that is the way Alvarez handled the 1968 student riots."

Bellis' contribution to "Democracy" was a detailed eyewitness account of the Mexico City street riots between July and December, 1968. Bellis was in Mexico City, and traveled to the provinces, gathering material for Johnson while completing work on his Ph.D. in Latin American politics.

Since publication of the book, and Bellis' identification as co-author, he has had to change his project and is now completing a dissertation in what he calls the politics of heroin addiction treatment programs in this country.

BELLIS SAID he met

Johnson at USC while completing his master's degree. He described the young political scientist as very active, tireless and vocal.

"We share a keen, common interest in Mexico," said Bellis. "I went into Baja with him one time to research elections, but we never went to Mexico City together. I was in the capital, as I said, as his research assistant when the riots broke out."

Bellis was caught in the middle of what became the most savage attack during the riots by Mexican riot police on Oct. 2. Unofficial estimates logged 190 killed and 1,500 arrested on "La Noche Triste," the night of sadness.

"Backed up by armored cars firing tracer bullets from .30 and .50-caliber machine guns," he recounted, "riot police charged into the middle of a rally and shot anything that moved."

"These riot police, 'grenaderos,' were specially recruited from among Indians. They have nothing in common with the urban Mexican and are brutal to the point of savagery."

"The crowd was trapped on the bloodied pavement as machine guns swept up and down their cowering ranks. Heads were literally torn from bodies. Most civilians were shot at such close range that their clothes had powder burns."

"I saw a 60-year-old woman bayoneted in the back and a 13-year-old boy stabbed in the head."

"The battle lasted less than an hour. Leaving the square, I crawled and ran and slipped over 190 bodies. I counted every one of them."

BELLIS RECORDED it all, on paper and film, and submitted his evidence to Johnson several months later. It later appeared in "the book" as a vivid example of Johnson's argument that Mexican politics have been so corrupted that the government will, and must, go to any length to stifle dissent in order to perpetuate the myth of the ongoing Mexican Revolution.

"Ken Johnson documented what most of his colleagues refused to believe," said Bellis.

"There is only one political party with any power in Mexico, the Revolutionary Institutional Party (PRI). It rules with an iron fist inside a mailed glove. No one gets anything in Mexico without first swearing body and soul allegiance to the PRI."

"Like most Western nations," Bellis continued, "Mexico suffers a serious generation gap which Johnson's colleagues are again only now grudgingly admitting. Mexican students and scholars want social reform and equal justice, but they get nowhere. The poor, more than 80 per cent of Mexico's population, are fearful of their government, and incidents like the Mexico City riots remind them of their powerlessness."

The union secretary said the beverage was acquired at wholesale rates. He retired before the members discovered the beer agent was his brother-in-law.

AMONG THE HIGHLIGHTS were speeches by the mayor and the congressman.

Both of them came out for organized labor. The congressman blamed a typographical error in the Congressional Record for the fact he was listed as voting for the Taft-Hartley Act.

He said it would be corrected in the next session.

The more cautious fathers loaded their kids into the Model A's and headed home before the fights started.

After that they all had a year of work to rest up in.

In the swim of things at show

Guppies bedazzle fanciers

By PAUL CLEGG
Staff Writer

Guppies, anyone?

You mean those bland tan fish that my father used to have down in the cellar, the females of which seemed to be perpetually pregnant?

Hardly!

I mean glamorous guppies, like the Viennese Emerald Double Swords, the swish-tailed Blue Veils, and the Red Snakeskin Deltas. Now those are guppies.

These and hundreds of other exotic guppies were swimming around in radiant splendor Sunday at the California International Guppy Show at the Edgewater Hyatt House in Long Beach. The show was sponsored by the Southern California Guppy Association.

Hundreds of guppy aficionados also were present, intently staring into the tanks, taking notes, debating whether they needed another Red Veil or Purple Delta for the home aquarium.

"I think we have enough reids in the tank now," said a dark-haired man to his wife.

"Not like that one," said his wife.

They walked on down the aisle toward the Red Bicolor Deltas.

"We could bid on that one," said a red-haired woman to her companion as they stood in front of a Gold Snake guppy.

"It'd be too expensive."

"No it wouldn't."

"I'm sure it would."

"Which ones are the Veils," asked a young girl behind me.

"The ones with the big tails," said her father.

I glanced over and concurred with a slight nod of the head. Striking tails, swishing through the water. The fish was almost half tail.

"They look like peacocks," said my companion.

We walked over to the bidding area where about 200 people were seated awaiting the big event.

A young man with glasses stood next to the auctioneer. On cue, he raised a plastic bag filled with water and inhabited by a solitary guppy which he described as a Green Delta.

The bidding started and ended at one dollar.

The next one was a Red Delta bred in Singapore by Mr. Yang. Inspired by the staccato exhortations of the auctioneer, this one went for three dollars.

I wandered back among the guppy fanciers where I ran into a man named Joe Krader who wore a green ribbon that said he was a senior judge.

Krader said that 1140 fish had been entered in the competition that was held Saturday. He said there were entrants from 15 countries.

"And how do you go about judging guppies?" I asked.

appeared on Krader's face.

"I mean are there any sorts of criteria."

"You look for a beautiful fish," he said, as though pointing out the obvious.

"Are there different categories of guppies?"

Yes, Krader said. In fact, there were 119 categories.

"And then how do you determine the top guppy," I asked in my plodding fashion.

"You look for the best fish, the prettiest," he said, still perplexed by the angle of questioning. "Nice dorsal, nice body..."

I nodded as though I understood and changed the subject. I asked how many members belonged to the Southern California Guppy Association. He said there were about 180 in the Long Beach area.

"All ages, or mainly older people?" I asked.

"All kinds of people," Krader said. "We have a lot of young people in the club."

'And a full dinnerpail'

still holding out for a full Labor Week.

THE FIRST LABOR DAY was celebrated in the city of New York in 1882.

It is now observed on the first Monday in September in all the states and territories.

In the ranks of labor it is the second-most-popular holiday, right after Loafing Day.

Loafing Day is celebrated on the first Monday of every week and on the first payday of every week all over the world.

Monday Loafing Day starts as soon as the workers arrive late for work.

Payday Loafing Day starts as soon as they leave early. The main event is the big parade to the bank.

The modern Labor Day is only a faint echo of the old ones.

It is a day when politicians wearing $250 suits and gold cufflinks wave their arms about the virtues of earning your living by the sweat of your brow.

Some of them even shake hands with union bosses. The other 364 days of the year they shake hands with themselves.

THE BIG PARADE of today is on the freeway as the workers try to get as far as possible from the scenes of their daily crimes.

Things were different in the old days when there were two popular ways to celebrate.

MY TOWN AND YOURS

Sterling Bemis

YOU MIGHT HAVE guessed it.

Labor Day was invented by an Irishman named Peter J. McGuire. He was just sitting around in his flat, feeling smug because he was all paid up in his dues in the Knights of Labor.

The idea hit him while he was sipping a growler of beer.

Why shouldn't the poor working stiffs have a holiday in their honor?

"Pete," he said to himself in Irish, "it's a fine idea you have there!"

So he put on his brogans and clomped down to the Central Labor Union and looked up Reilly the Secretary and O'Connor the Walking Delegate and they all went to Paddy's Bar and Grill.

And after six beers they had worked out all the details down to the parade route, although O'Connor the Walking Delegate was

Sssh, Spiro! Let Ted talk

WASHINGTON — The reformation of Spiro T. Agnew is too bad, in a way. But it may not last. The vice president is given to uttering unspeakable truths spontaneously and without the help of literary craftsmen who created such howlers as Radcliff.

It should have been more widely noted that President Nixon is a cooperative participant in remaking Vice President Agnew's image. At the Miami convention Nixon talked on national television about "Ted" Agnew, the name Agnew used in winning the suburban vote which made him governor of Maryland.

Spiro came into political fashion in the Nixon administration when it seemed more expedient to emphasize Agnew's

Richard
Wilson

Greek origin in the national ethnic communities. If Spiro is to become Ted again, at least in presidential circles, he may reemerge as he once was, a moderate Republican and supporter of Nelson A. Rockefeller with a footing in the sprawling suburban areas from which he rose to become a national household name.

Ted Agnew is not wholly different from Spiro T. They both say what is on a great many minds. Ted Agnew bawled out moderate Negro leaders in Maryland for letting their race go to pot. Spiro T. contrasted the ineffectually complaining American black leadership with the dedication and purpose of African leaders he visited in 1971.

On the whole, however, Ted Agnew has a more progressive image than Spiro T. Ted is the clean-cut executive type who rolls up his sleeves to bring order out of chaos and make everybody happy and satisfied. That was the image projected when he ran for governor. In one television commercial he was cast in this image without his ever saying one word.

SPIRO T. has, however, one outstanding achievement which Ted may never be able to duplicate. Single voiced, Spiro T. made the mass communications media so self-conscious that it undertook desirable reforms which have diminished the growing tide of public disgust with one-sided commentary and news reporting.

All the way protesting that Agnew was maligning them and violating the sanctity of the First Amendment, the eastern establishment media undertook subtle reforms to show its bias less. Spiro T. made every writer and broadcaster acutely aware that there was a sizeable body of opinion in their audiences that distrusted them and, for practical reasons, they had better find ways to give a stronger impression of fairness and non-involvement.

Ted Agnew is to be less controversial — he says. This is as patently impossible as it was for Nixon to become non-controversial. Controversy is the source of their strength. Without it they would become like Thomas E. Dewey in 1948 against Harry S. Truman. Dewey sacrificed everything in that fateful year to unity, and was unified out of the presidency.

This strategy was much argued in the Dewey-Warren campaign as it apparently is now in the Nixon-Agnew campaign. There was no trouble in that respect with Earl Warren. He was easily able to restrain unbridled criticism of the Truman years. For Dewey it was a great effort, as it will be with Nixon and Agnew.

IN FACT, they are not restraining themselves very much. It does not come naturally to them to expect easy victory, and if Ted Agnew is not getting across with the same impact as Spiro T. Agnew it can be expected that the old Agnew will be resurrected and something may be heard from the old Nixon, too.

The high road remains the surest road for both of them whatever adverse turns the campaign may take. It is probably true that what happens between now and election day will be far more important than what anyone says. A rise in unemployment, an adverse turn in relations with China, a bad time in Vietnam could hurt Nixon's chances more the comparative level of campaign rhetoric.

Nixon begins the campaign with a reservoir or public trust far greater than Sen. George McGovern's, according to the Harris Poll, and this is an asset which cannot prudently be dissipated by excesses of rhetoric.

Therefore a low-key Agnew is called for, but the old Spiro T. will be missed if not mourned by those who delight in all revealing truths or howling boners which polarize opinion around a phrase. Unconvinced Democrats may comment about the new Agnew: if you've seen one Agnew, you've seen them all.

YET ANOTHER CHANGE IN MIND

W. Europe's big goals lie behind big problems

BELGRADE — 1973 will be an exceptionally significant year for world history and, almost as soon as the fallout of the United States presidential election lifts, serious preparations will begin for a kind of Annus Mirabilis intended to set the western European coalition further along the global power road.

The movement, of course, begins with accession of Britain and three other states

C. L.
Sulzberger

NEW YORK TIMES

to the Common Market, establishing for this organization control of approximately half the earth's trade. This has incalculable diplomatic implications, making the European community the greatest commercial superpower of them all.

After the formalization of this event one may expect final convocation of a European security conference to ratify existing de facto frontiers that divide the continent between non-Communist West and Communist East. Nobody puts it that way but such is the meeting's quintessential purpose.

Once this second stage has been accomplished — next year — Western Europe will face two obvious tasks. The first is to devise machinery giving it more and steadier monetary union vis-a-vis the rest of the world. The second must establish a formula bridging the need for more communal unity within the tradition of separate nationalisms.

This will take a long time but 1973 cannot escape seeing basic guidelines for the process laid down. All market members acknowledge the need for better coordination of fiscal relationships. The dream of a single "European" currency lies at the end of that road.

The new Western Europe will then have to examine its defense problem in a way never before presented. The very fact that a security conference must inevitably reduce east-west tension by formally legalizing détente is bound to have its effect on NATO.

WHILE PRESIDENT NIXON is almost universally regarded as certain to be re-elected and while he has frequently assured NATO that American forces will remain in Europe, it is obvious their strength will be further cut. This is bound to be Washington's response to the demands of the American electorate and to the expected reduced tension in Europe's heart.

Thus, willy-nilly, the European community must assume that greater burden of its own defense which the Americans have been urging — but it is unlikely to respond in the fashion Washington suggests: more conventional strength. On the contrary, everything points to embryonic creation of a European nuclear force which, while coordinated with the changing NATO structure, will be specifically designed for West Europe's needs.

The primary law governing United States military atomics is the McMahon act, due to expire in 1973. As interpreted since its enactment, this limits passing of secret American nuclear-military information to Britain, occasioning immense resentment in France.

NEVERTHELESS, there have been intermittent if unsatisfactory discussions between the British and the French in recent years, considering the theoretical possibility of pooling the two countries' own existing nuclear forces for the benefit of "Europe."

Prime Minister Heath believes such a "European" nuclear force would have been decades off without British membership in the Common Market. Now it looms nearer, although hitherto Heath has tacitly agreed with President Pompidou that it is not yet ripe for discussion.

For his own part, Pompidou has so far staved off any serious consideration of the idea until the McMahon Act either lapses or is amended or repassed in its present form by the United States Congress. Should Britain's favored position vis-a-vis American secrets terminate, the French president seems to believe London might veer more swiftly to a "European" concept of defense.

MANY DIFFICULT problems are involved. Could Franco-British nuclear cooperation be strengthened with full United States blessing and equal access of France to secrets and material now available only to Britain? And how could this be done in, with or alongside NATO unless France's in-and-out relationship with the alliance is redefined?

How could an evolving "European" force be adjusted to the restrictions of the recent Salt pact between Washington and Moscow that limits not only United States and Soviet but NATO and Warsaw Pact atomic weapons systems, even if the latter limitation refer only to the Soviet Union?

These are all perplexing but immensely vital questions. And among others who regard their solution with uneasy fascination is China. Peking feels the massive pressure of Soviet military forces along its long frontier and doesn't fancy too much easement of tension for the USSR on its vital western border with Europe.

Playing it safe

Looking over the letters to the editor, there are days when we almost think that Paul Sagaser has the answer.

Sagaser is editor, reporter, printer, advertising salesman and sole owner of the weekly Loomis News (circulation 500).

Since he started his one-man newspaper in 1940, Sagaser has never written an editorial. "If you start taking sides," he explains, "there's an element against you, and that's not good for a small business."

Sagaser doesn't even let his readers know whom he favors for president. (In 1968 it was Nixon; this time it might be McGovern.)

This system doesn't attract new subscribers very often. On the other hand, Sagaser seldom loses a subscriber.

Sagaser's newsgathering efforts are similarly casual. "I used to work a lot harder," he says, "but now I let things go as they will. Most of my news and advertising is dropped through the slot of the front door."

At 68, Sagaser says he occasionally thinks of retiring. If he ever does, he might consider writing one editorial to share with his readers all those opinions that went unstated for 32 years. It just might make him feel good. And surely the people of Loomis would tolerate one editorial once they realized that its main function was therapeutic.

We're for Alf Landon

One man who earned his moment in the spotlight at the Republican convention was Alfred M. Landon.

He earned it not only by his championing of a hopeless cause when he ran for president against Franklin Roosevelt in 1936 but by the wisdom he has given his party and his nation since then.

Some of that wisdom became government policy in the Nixon administration. That must have been a special reward for Landon, who is pleased to be "100 per cent" behind the President for reelection.

It was Landon who cautioned of the dangers of inflation. It was Landon who favored admitting Communist China to the dialogue of nations. It was Landon who favored nuclear disarmament and "an end to outmoded policy of containing the Communists by force."

"They said, 'The party doesn't agree with you,'" he told a reporter in Miami Beach. "And I said, 'Well, I don't mind.'"

The reporter asked if he felt vindicated by the policies President Nixon had adopted and by Landon's own return to the Republican sunshine in Miami Beach.

"Vindicated?" Landon replied. "That's your word. . . . I'm not going to be the one who says it."

He doesn't need to. After all these years, the Republican party said it for him. The nation should say it too.

What others say

Good guys vs. the bad

R.S.V.P.

When the Nixonians came to Washington in 1969, they brought with them, so it was said, a kind of bible written by a young Irishman from the Bronx named Kevin Phillips. It was called The Emerging Republican Majority, and it was a tediously detailed survey of all the nation's voter groups.

Mr. Phillips has since graduated to the status of a pundit, and day after day in his syndicated column he hacks away at a single theme: The Democrats are loose-living, free-spending sybarites, and the wholesome, virtuous corn-fed Republicans are going to supplant them as the nation's permanent majority party.

LIFE WOULD BE very simple if more people were willing to be themselves.

HARD WORK never kills anyone, they say, but occasionally it wears us down.

THERE'S nothing like an increased income to make a man, or woman, feel like the world is better.

MOST SPEAKERS would be more careful of what they say if they knew someone in the audience would question their statements.

The fascinating thing about Mr. Phillips' world is that it is inhabited by stereotypes, not people. His Democrats, rather like the boiler-plate characters in an Alan Drury novel, run to type — especially in Washington. If they aren't stuffing themselves at expensive restaurants, they are to be found wearing off the calories with nude swimming, or consorting with the "usually nude" cast of "Hair," or conducting "assignments in the Lincoln bed."

For most middle and low-echelon Republicans who came here in 1969, (Mr. Phillips goes on) Washington remains an enemy-held city. So the people from Pasadena and Long Island have barbecues in the suburbs and read about limousine liberalism in the "Style" section of the Washington Post.

If we've ever seen a man in desperate need of a party invitation, it's Mr. Kevin Phillips. Unfortunately, a skinny dip in the White House pool can no longer be arranged, for the very fundamental reason that Mr. Nixon has shut down the pool and it is not to be supposed, anyway, that a President who wears a suit and necktie on the California beaches goes in for nude athletics.

But we would suggest to Mr. Phillips that he make application to the administration's resident swinger, Henry Kissinger, who could probably arrange a party at which nude bathing would at least be an option. Surely some way can be found to introduce Mr. Phillips to wickedness. If all else fails, we suppose he could become a Democrat.

Letters to the editor

Divvying the stew

EDITOR:

With respect to the apparently contradictory school cost figures presented at the Board of Education meeting last week and reported in the Independent, Press-Telegram the following clarifications are offered:

In citing average costs per ADA unit of $928 for common-board districts and $817 for all districts, the city college academic senate spokesman, Richard Fairchild, inadvertently identified these as community college cost figures. As his accompanying data sheet made clear, however, the figures actually applied to the total unit cost of education (K-12 plus community college). It is obviously the total cost which concerns the taxpayer.

We all know that partial statistics are like half-truths. The selected statistics presented to the board of education (by a not-exactly-neutral unified school district staff member) were correct as far as they went, but are quite misleading. Although community college costs have indeed been well below the state average in common-board districts, this does not mean that common boards are in fact more "economical" or somehow more advantageous to a community than separate boards.

In fact, as shown by the more complete academic senate figures, lower college costs under many common boards have been more than offset by higher total costs (as in Long Beach, Santa Monica, San Francisco).

Let the total cost of education in a common board district equal 100 pounds of rabbit-and-mutton stew. From 15 to 20 per cent of the stew is rabbit (community college), and from 80 to 85 per cent is mutton (K-12). Now, if you save five cents a pound on 15-20 pounds of rabbit but spend just a couple of cents per pound more on the 80-85 pounds of mutton, your rabbit-and-mutton stew is not really a bargain for the taxpayer.

It is the contention of the city college academic senate that precisely because LBCC costs are already low, there is no reason for them to increase. We believe that a separate community college district board, giving full-time attention to the needs of the college, can not only keep costs in line but can serve the college and the community more effectively. And a separate unified school district board and administration, while giving undivided attention to the needs of one of the largest K-12 districts in California, might also keep a more careful watch on the price of mutton.

An act of kindness

EDITOR:

I'd like to thank the Nursing Office & Staff of Pacific Hospital for their cooperation and understanding recently when they were so nice about allowing the young people of the Teen Center for the Handicapped and our family, to hold a joint twin birthday celebration for my son, who was a patient, and the other girl twin, who wasn't.

It was heart warming to know that through everyone's kindness they really made an otherwise dismal prospect into such a wonderful day after all.

LONG BEACH MRS. T. W. La CHAMBRE

PEERLESS WORLD

"Attention everybody: I've got a terrific idea! Let's all tune in to the same radio station for awhile—I'm getting a headache!"

Soft mental muscles need stretching, too

My friend Blague was going away for the summer. What he wanted to do on his vacation, he told me, was "some fishing, some golfing, and some reading."

I pointed out that there is a golf course near his home, and he snorted: "That course is too easy for me; it's no challenge. Out where I'm going, there's a golf course that really puts you on your toes!"

STRICTLY PERSONAL

Sydney Harris

I next pointed out that he could get all the fishing he wanted close to home, and he sneered: "Who wants to sit in a boat all day with a rod in his hand? I like wading in those trout streams and going after fish that put up a fierce fight."

Then I asked the question I had been slyly leading up to right along.

"What kind of reading are you going to do? 'War and Peace'? 'The Brothers Karamazov'? Plato's 'Republic'?"

He looked at me as if I were crazy. "That heavy stuff?" he jeered. "I should say not. This is my vacation. I want something light and relaxing — something that won't tax my mind."

"Do you read that 'heavy stuff' the rest of the year?" I asked, knowing what the answer was going to be. "Afraid not," he said. "Just can't seem to find the time to go through more than the newspapers, a few magazines and maybe a novel or two."

"WELL," I PERSISTED, "if you want to spend the summer on a tougher golf course, and are looking forward to fishing in rougher waters, then why don't you go after something more challenging in the way of literature, too? Isn't it pretty much the same thing?"

He looked at his watch and decided he was late for an appointment. I wished him a happy summer as he left, and what he privately wished me, I don't care to know.

Nothing is guaranteed to make a man more unpopular than to point up the contradictions in other people's viewpoints. Blague knows that his body doesn't get enough exercise during the year, and sinks into a physical rut, but he is unwilling to make the same damaging admission about his mind.

The mental muscles become just as limp and flabby as the physical muscles, and only stretching them beyond their accustomed routine can restore their tone and vitality. One story Blague will never tell when he returns from his vacation is about that big book that got away.

GEORGE ROBESON

I just bet the ones with bushy tails

THE GUYS I KNOW who play the ponies usually are seen squinting their eyes against the cigarette smoke that curls from the ash-hanging butt in the corner of their mouths while they read the 'morning line' in the sports section of the newspaper.

They would not admit it, but they are straight out of a Damon Runyon story. They could take lessons from a horse handicapper who knows the game, but seldom plays it.

Her name is Beth Lisa Bennett. She is 15 years old, just five feet high, pretty enough to consider offers from modeling agencies, and interested in a job as a groom at the racetrack.

She has been choosing winners at the track with more than moderate success since she was 11 years old as an intense hobby, which falls forward to fishing in rougher waters, then why don't you go after something more challenging in the way of literature, too? Isn't it pretty much the same thing?"

She knows the bloodlines of most of the nation's thoroughbreds the way a British genealogist knows the Royal Family. She knows the results of the daily workouts of these horses, how they ran in the last meet at any track, and usually why they ran that way.

A 15-year-old handicapper is not someone you met every week, and I asked her why she did this sort of thing. She gave me the same sort of surprise face I might have seen if I had asked Hillary why he climbed Mt. Everest.

SHE LOVES HORSES, it's as simple as that. And the best horses, she believes, are those who run races for a living.

With those persons of my acquaintance who place wagers upon animals running around a track, it's a way to make a buck if possible. With Beth Bennett, it's a science that requires about two hours a day of study. That still leaves plenty of time for the studies that give her a B average at school. It doesn't make money for her, except for the times her parents go to the track and she gives them the likely money-runners.

Beth doesn't know much about the gambling business.

"To my friends who play the horses," I said to her, "the difference between a crap game and a horse race is that one of them is played indoors."

"I don't know anything about cards," she answered. That shows you what little Beth knows about gambling.

BUT HER AVERAGE record for picking the best horses at any track on any 9-race day is 5 to 7 winners.

In each race, she judges these factors, in order of importance:

The type of race (length, age and class of horses, turf or dirt track), the breeding of each horse, the past performance of each horse, workout records, the jockey and the weight to be carried. She can recite all those facts off the top of her head like a Hollywood gossip columnist would recap the track record of Elizabeth Taylor and Zsa Zsa Gabor.

On the other hand, she admits to the mystical element of luck. One day, her 6-year-old brother, Steve, picked all nine winners in a race. He simply called out all the numbers he liked.

I ASKED HER if she would agree that betting on horses is the dumbest sort of gambling.

"No," she said, "I think the stock market is. It's the difference between betting on horses and betting on people. I have a much better idea of what horses are going to do."

It was a (2) grand ceremony

You know our young people, always searching for something innovative and different. So it's little wonder a startling new fad is sweeping the country. It's called marriage.

Not only are our young people rushing to get married in droves — and even two at a time — but big, formal weddings are coming back.

This certainly is good news for fathers who'll have to shell out a couple of grand for their daughter's nuptial ceremonies. And if you don't think any father in his right mind isn't happy to shell out a couple of grand to see his daughter married, consider the typical case of Wilbur Wasp.

MR. AND MRS. WASP, middle-aged, middle class and middle-of-the-road, lived in Middleville, where they raised their beloved daughter, Winifred.

Like any decent, intelligent, middle-class daughter, Winifred, on reaching the age of consent, went off to live in Greenwich Village with a struggling young poet named Irwin, who was struggling to learn how to spell.

Winifred changed her name to "Ms." and she and Irwin were quite happy. Mr. and Mrs. Wasp, of course, were quite shocked. They never mentioned Irwin in their letters and told acquaintances Winifred was "living in New York with a friend," (whose name, when passed, they could never seem to remember).

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

So all went well for a couple of years. All went well until Winifred wrote that she and Irwin were coming home to Middleville for a visit. It was then that Mrs. Wasp nervously asked the question of Mr. Wasp that has rocked thousands of American households this past decade.

"But where," she asked, "will they sleep?"

When Winifred and Irwin arrived one evening, they were welcomed at the door by Mr. and Mrs. Wasp, both striving to look broad-minded.

"Now you just take your suitcase right up to your room, dear," Mrs. Wasp told Winifred. "We've kept it just the way you left it, with your tiny, narrow, little single bed and all."

"But I had twin beds, mother," protested Winifred.

"Oh, we moved the other downstairs to change the decor, dear. Don't you think it looks nice?"

"In the middle of the living room?" asked Winifred.

"And there's your towel, Irwin, on the coffee table," said Mrs. Wasp. "Just put your suitcase on the sofa."

"MY, IT'S 8 O'CLOCK already," said Mr. Wasp yawning hastily. "I think I'll hit the old sack."

It was a very long night. Mrs. Wasp kept saying she heard burglars. Mr. Wasp kept saying he hoped so. Mrs. Wasp kept wondering how they could keep Irwin in the house with all the blinds pulled. Mr. Wasp kept wishing he had the courage to get up and get a glass of water.

The Wasps stayed in bed until 9 a.m. to be sure everyone else was up. But they were so bleary from lack of sleep when they finally came downstairs they had difficulty understanding Winifred when she broke the news.

"We came home to tell you that Irwin and I are getting married," said Winifred. "And we'd like a big formal wedding."

Winifred and Irwin were married in a big formal wedding that very afternoon.

It cost Mr. Wasp $2,372.16 — what with the rush orders to caterers, florists, musicians and seamstresses. But, like any father, he felt the money well spent.

"After all, we're not losing a daughter," as he told a happily tearful Mrs. Wasp, "we're gaining a good night's sleep."

MEDICINE AND YOU

By BEN ZINSER

A doctor thinks that a powerful tranquilizer, chlorpromazine, may have an anticancer effect.

Dr. Laszlo K. Csatory of Jefferson Memorial Hospital, Alexandria, Va., says it is well established that the cancer death rate among mental patients is significantly lower than that of other segments of the population.

The low incidence of cancer is particularly evident among patients who have been in mental hospitals for more than 10 years. It's not known why this is so.

Dr. Csatory suggests that the chlorpromazine-type drugs may be an important factor in reducing cancer among the mentally ill. Reason: These drugs have been widely used in large doses and for long periods for the treatment of the mentally ill.

The doctor describes "a few" cases in which patients with advanced cancer improved after administration of large doses of chlorpromazine.

The drug is also known by the name Thorazine. Details of the study are in the journal Lancet.

Researchers have discovered what appears to be a link between the parainfluenza virus and multiple sclerosis, a progressive, disabling disease of the nervous system.

The parainfluenza virus causes upper respiratory infections. Researchers have been unable to isolate it directly from brain cells — but through a special process have been able to isolate it from the brains of two victims of multiple sclerosis.

Involved in the research are the departments of pediatrics and neuropathology of the University of Göttingen, Germany, and the Wistar Institute of Anatomy and Biology, Philadelphia.

The report is in the journal Lancet.

A drug, chondroitin sulfate A, markedly reduced the heart-attack rate among 60 patients suffering from heart disease, a Los Angeles doctor reported to the International College of Angiology in London.

Dr. Lester M. Morrison, director of the Institute for Arteriosclerosis Research, said the death and illness rate was one-sixth that of a comparison group treated by conventional therapy.

The medication is taken by mouth and causes no side effects, he reported.

The study covered five years and is a follow-up to an earlier one reported by Dr. Morrison on the effects of the drug CSA.

Details are in Internal Medicine News, a medical newspaper.

L-dopa, the relatively new wonder drug for Parkinson's disease (shaking palsy), appears to improve intellectual functioning in some patients, New York doctors report.

Cornell University physicians say that 18 of 40 patients with moderate to severe disease improved by at least 10 IQ points after five to 13 months of daily treatment with L-dopa.

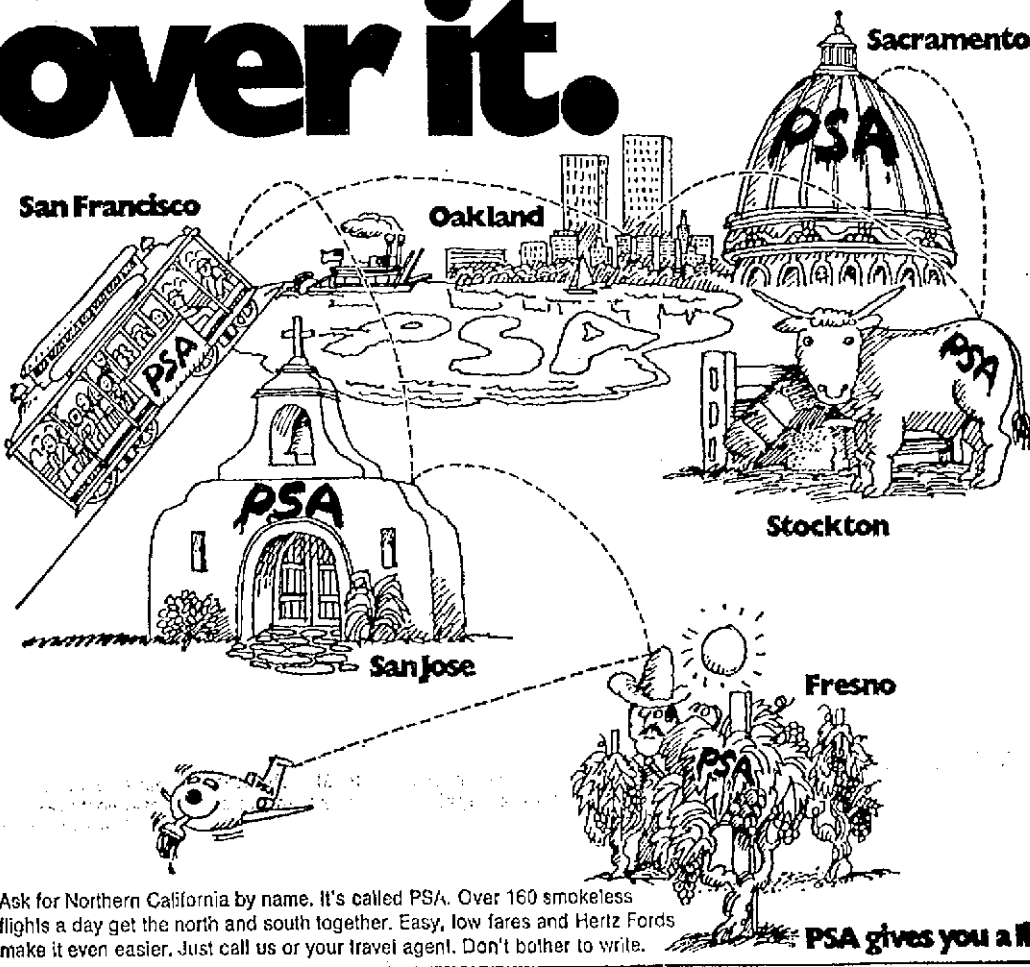

The report is in Archives of General Psychiatry, a medical journal. (ED. NOTE: Due to the volume of his mail Ben Zinser frequently cannot respond to requests from readers. In no circumstances can he offer diagnosis.)

Captured servicemen on way home Area residents remove PW tags

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

In dozens of homes around the Long Beach area this weekend, short, emotion-filled rituals were performed.

It was a simple ritual, a happy one, and its occasion came unexpectedly. Silver identification bracelets bearing the names and corresponding serial numbers of three servicemen were removed by their wearers.

The servicemen—Navy lieutenants Markham Ligon Gartley and Norris Alphonzo Charles and Air Force Major Edward Knight Elias—are prisoners of the Indochina war who soon will be released by the North Vietnamese.

The bracelets bearing their names in plain black letters were worn by people who knew little or nothing about the three servicemen, but who committed themselves to carrying constant reminders to Americans continue to be held as political prisoners half-way around the world.

For the daughter of Independent Press-Telegram stereotyper Ron Jackson, and for Mrs. Carolyn Brown, of 16120 Cornelia Ave. in Bellflower, the unexpected announcement of the prisoners' pending release was a happy surprise.

They wear the bracelets, originally distributed by the nonprofit student group Voices in Vital America, bearing the name of Lt. (j.g.) Norris Charles.

"We were so happy," said Mrs. Brown after hearing the officer's name announced on TV. "Now I'll take the bracelet off. I'm so glad for him."

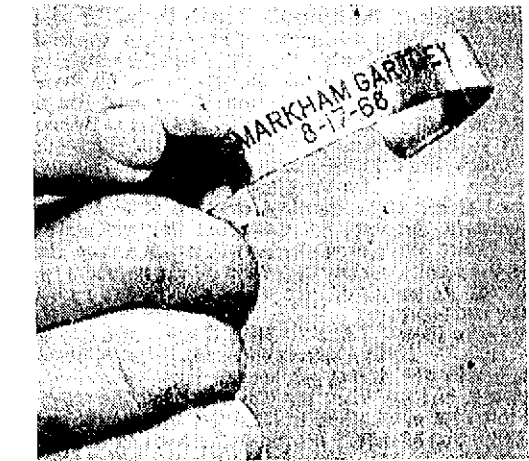

For Jack Carey, 3636 Pacific Ave., a veteran of 14 years in the Army, the announcement of Lt. (j.g.) Markham Gartley's pending release brought jubilation.

"I was dumbfounded when his name was flashed on the television last night," said Carey. "Dumbfounded. We're very happy for him."

"I bought the bracelet with his name on it in a Laguna Beach restaurant last Christmas. A friend who was with me at the time told me it was just another 'get-your-money' scheme. He's here calling his words now."

"I've got the bracelet sitting on top of the TV right now," added Carey. "When Gartley gets back, if there's any way to get it back to him, I'd like to have it."

In the hometowns of Gartley, Dandridge, Fla.; of Charles, San Diego; and of Elias, Little Rock, Ark., the celebrations must have touched every resident.

Key Club at Millikan to join charity drive

Millikan High School's Key Club will take to the streets again this year supporting the national Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

Object of the drive, scheduled to begin Wednesday evening is raising more than $1,000 for research of the most chronic affliction of children and young adults.

Key Club members will walk door-to-door in the Millikan High area Wednesday, Sunday and one other day as yet undecided, said Steve Beck, club president. The 21 young men in the club will be joined by members of Achetes, a similar Millikan service organization of more than 40 young women.

Beck said that the canvas area will be bounded by Stearns Avenue, Spring Street, Studebaker Road and Bellflower Boulevard. He added that the club might also again push a hospital bed around Lakewood Shopping Center to collect additional funds.

Cystic fibrosis is a disease of children and young adults marked by thick mucus in the lungs, persistent lung infections, failure to gain weight and digestive disturbances.

saw how they have babies."

Another first grader drew the harbor with what looks like a tug, half as big as the Queen, towing the mammoth ship. The printing reads, "This is the harbor with the boats and fish. I love you."

The drawings from the Anderson School, Garden Grove, are somewhat more sophisticated. Richard Lauder's pencil drawing resembles an architect's scale sketch, but Richard added an American flag in color, waving from the stern.

port Mesa Unified School District.

"The rather imposing mural lends a certain amount of dignity to the exhibit, capturing the Queen in true colors and proportions, but not even a semi-professional appearing painting of the Queen can match second grader Erik's impression."

"The Queen Mary," he says, "has 2,000 portholes and 3 anchors (sic) and 4 propellers and an engine room and a steering wheel."

Screenwriter pools his talent

NEW YORK — "I write in my swimming pool," said once-upon-a-time actor Tom Tryon who wrote "The Other."

I pretended not to be surprised.

"Standing waist high in the water," he continued. "My swimming pool, in Bel-Air, is quiet and I can think well there."

"I suppose you have a nice desk there?" I said. "No, I have no desk in the water. I write on the edge of the pool on a legal pad."

"Hemingway used to write standing up at a desk but indoors, not in a pool," I mentioned.

"He probably didn't have a swimming pool," Tom Tryon said.

Well, I guess I should recommend to every writer that he write in a swimming pool, because Tryon's enormously successful novel became a hit movie and he is now trying to forget he was an actor in "The Cardinal," hoping to write another highly successful book (poolside).

"I didn't know the small regard the American movie actor was held in until I became a writer," Tryon said on a recent afternoon at Galathea's.

"Now that I've written a book, people tend to look at me as I like to be looked at. In Washington, a critic took me to the train. The cab driver, so I heard later, asked the critic, 'Isn't that guy some kind of actor?' The critic said, 'No! He's an author.' That made me proud."

Tryon, 46 now, divorced, a Yale honor graduate whom Gertrude Lawrence persuaded to go on the stage, never suspecting he would wind up in, "Wish You Were Here" in 1932 with Jack Cassidy, Phyllis Newman and Bernice Massi, did his last acting five years ago, in a movie in Australia he hasn't seen.

"Do you intend to go on hamming it up?"

"No. I think I'll let the ham smoke a while."

As a writer, Tryon has another foible: he carries his manuscript always with him and sleeps with it under the mattress. "It's a superstition that I had as an actor. Put the script under the mattress and the lines would penetrate through to my brain. The only thing happens with a book manuscript is, the longer you work on the book, the lumpier the mattress gets!"

All I can remember is that I had pets. An alreale named Bristles that sucked eggs — a high crime for dogs back on the farm where I grew up in Ohio — and some neighbor did away with him. And we had a fine buggy horse we called "Old Dick" who was so gentle that my sister Lois and I could safely ride him though we were small. And we had cats which I tossed up in the air because somebody told me cats always landed on their feet. I remember my mother baking bread, and making cider, and the "butcher" in the winter, and not much more. What the psychiatrist would learn about me was that I have a bad memory. (What about you?)

VENICE, Italy (UPI) —

A series of juries handed out prizes for best films, actors and directors Sunday on the closing day of the officially priceless Venice International Film Festival.

The festival officially dropped prizes in the late 1960s in an effort to avoid destruction by young demonstrators who attacked the spectacle as too bourgeois but independent juries make their own selections.

Stanley Kubrick's "A Clockwork Orange" won the Pasinetti Prize for the best foreign film, awarded by the members of the Italian National Film Journalists' Union.

An international jury of critics picked "Kocksgatan 48" by Johan Bergenstrahle of Sweden as its favorite film. The foreign critics gave a pair of best actress awards, to Tuesday Weld of the United States for "Play It As It Lays," directed by Frank Perry, and to Jutta Hoffmann of East Germany for "Der Dritte."

Bill Douglas of England won the prize for best first work. He directed "My Childhood."

The International Federation of Film Journalists awarded "best film" designations to "Bas Ya Bahat" by Khalid Siddik of Kuwait and to "Simabaddha" by Satyajit Ray of India.

Lady musician turns KNOB

By PATRICIA QUINN

By the plaques and membership certificates lining the walls, the office could be that of any Chamber of Commerce booster, any person in business who believes in total community involvement.

And from the long, tall, oval and grouped pictures of spouse and children that surround the desk, the office also could belong to any family man, any person willing to show his tender side.

There is nothing at all, really, to distinguish this office from that of any other joiner of community organizations. It could fit almost any businessman.

But it is actually homebase for a successful businesswoman — one of the very few to own a radio station.

Jeannette Banoczi is owner, president, public relations officer and sales manager for radio station KNOB, the only high-powered FM station in Long Beach and Orange County.

KNOB broadcasts in stereo 24 hours a day, reaching "adult music listeners" from San Diego to Santa Barbara. It is headquartered in the Anaheim Hyatt House, directly across the street from Disneyland. But the station's twin transmitters are located on Signal Hill, requiring the radio operation to identify itself on the air as KNOB, Long Beach.

THE TWO BASES for the station is one of the reasons the business executive, who with her husband and sister also own a station in Las Vegas, joined all those city and county groups.

The other reason is that Jeannette Banoczi believes the success of her present station and its predecessor, KGGK of Garden Grove, was in direct correlation to the station's involvement in the community. Plus the public relations-minded woman, quite simply, likes meeting people.

"We didn't just stay here," she says indicating the five-room studio, "and spin records."

"We wanted to get to know the people, and we wanted them to get to know us. When we started out at KGGK in 1961, we were completely unknown. We built that station from scratch."

"To make us known in a hurry, we started giving away cash prizes. In a four year period—the two we were at KGGK and the first two here—we must have given away over $100,000 in prizes to women's groups and service clubs, all non-profit organizations. "Everything just seemed to mushroom."

SHE STARTED JOINING groups, including the Downtown Long Beach Merchants Association and the Orange County Chamber of Commerce where she is the only member to have brought in over 100 other new members. (She received a desk plaque for this.) In 1966 she became the only female president of the chamber's senator's club. In 1964 she became the first woman member of Sales and Marketing executive club (after they changed their by-laws). She is now vice president for Sales and Marketing and is a member of the Small Business Management Advisory Committee for Santa Ana College. In addition, Mrs. Banoczi was recently appointed to the Resource Management Committee in the Orange County Overall Economic Development Plan.

But for all her non-stay-at-home ways, Jeannette Banoczi — full of determination and confidence in herself — is "absolutely dead set against" women's liberation.

"I never expected to get anything I wasn't qualified for," she says in way of explanation. "But if I felt I was qualified for something, I'd work like the dickens to get it."

"A person can be successful no matter if he's female, male, or what color."

"And," she adds in that matter-of-fact confidence, "I have achieved all of my goals."

MRS. BANOCZI'S goals have included playing trumpet for the famous Phil Spitalny's Hour of Charm for three years in the early 40's. This was a coast to coast radio broadcast from New York City of what was considered the greatest of the all-girl bands. She later played trumpet for a short period with Ina Ray Hutton in Las Vegas.

Jeannette had learned to play from her father, who played trumpet for the local concert band in Concord, N.H., where she grew up. Jeannette was 10-years-old and one of nine children — the only one to become a professional musician although her mother was also a pianist.

"I had a beautiful childhood. I can't remember a day when my mother didn't sit down and play the piano."

"We were brought up on a farm, grew our own food. And we all had chores to do." Mrs. Banoczi, who has three children and one grandchild of her own, says her great grandmother was an Indian squaw.

Jeannette now lives in San Juan Capistrano in the Mission Hills Ranch with her husband, Jack and her youngest daughter, Naomi, by her first marriage to the late Humbert Pennino.

Mrs. Banoczi first came to the West Coast with the late Pennino, who played first trumpet with Arturo Toscanini and the Metropolitan Opera, to play in the movie "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home Again."

They stayed and opened the Pennino Music Co., a wholesale musical instrument and accessories service, in Los Angeles, which Mrs. Banoczi still owns and operates with her sister, Lynn Boutlay.

And except for the 10 years Jeannette concentrated on raising her three daughters, and the period her late husband was ill with cancer, Jeannette has continued her musical activities.

WITH JACK, whom she married 2 years ago and who plays clarinet and saxophone, she plays once or twice a month for Elk's, Chamber of Commerce or other clubs' events. This is with the Jack Banet (his stage name) Orchestra.

Jack also handles all the programming for KNOB and the Las Vegas station which Jeannette says proudly is "so successful, it outpulled six of the twelve other stations in that area in 1971."

"Our stations have a bright beautiful format. Modern tunes but done by all the fine groups and vocalists. It's good music, the kind Jack and I like to hear and play, but it doesn't put you to sleep. It's bright and beautiful, what adult people like to hear."

SHE PROUDLY NOTES that when she and Jack started KGGK, "we were the first FM station west of the Mississippi to go stereo 24 hours a day."

"We really made history with that move."

"Most other stations just go stereo late at night when the sponsor requests it and pays for it. But we're interested in our listeners."

They sold KGGK, which now operates as KOIJ (they didn't sell the call letters), because they wanted to expand to all of Southern California.

"We brought a lot of those listeners over here with us and a lot of those sponsors too," she says returning again to her salesman role. "We've had some accounts for 11 years with commercials running every day."

"The greatest thing in business is getting results for the selling spots."

Jeannette Banoczi, energetic executive, visits advertising agencies in Los Angeles at least once a week, once a month in Las Vegas and several times a year in San Francisco.

"Just between you and me," she confides, "I outsell my five other salesmen combined."

CHILD ALIVE

Kitchen proves most dangerous home area

Dr. Jay M. Arena, President of the American Academy of Pediatricians, is a world authority on childhood accidents. Following is the second of three articles on home safety.

By DR. JAY M. ARENA
Copyright, 1972, Women's News Service Copyright.

When a baby starts to walk the mother begins to run.

This ancient axiom is truer today than ever before, and there is no way the strain and responsibility it involves can be shirked. Ignoring it will expose a child to the leading cause of fatalities in the age group — 1- to 3-year-old accidents in the home. If parents severely restrict a child's movements, they will stifle his healthy curiosity and the self-confidence every youngster needs for normal development.

The only sensible solution to the problem is to recognize that a baby's entire environment takes on new dimensions that invite exploration and perception as soon as he can walk. To walk not only means to move about, but to fall or otherwise come into harm's way. It is imperative for parents to examine the home and eliminate methodically the potential hazards a toddler has not yet learned to avoid.

Start with the kitchen. According to the Council on Family Health, a nonprofit, public service organization sponsored by the manufacturers of medicines to promote safety in the home, the kitchen is potentially the most dangerous area for a young child.

THE FIRST precaution taken should be to remove all cleaning agents, detergents, disinfectants and insecticides from bins, under sinks and low cupboards. Put such preparations well out of the reach of children. If necessary, make doubly sure a youngster cannot get to them if he stands on a chair, by putting a lock on the storage area, or better still, install secure self-locking cabinet doors.

In 1970 the National Clearinghouse for Poison Control Centers received 114,228 reports of poison ingestions — and it is probable that five times as many cases were not reported. The overwhelming majority of the victims were small children who could not read labels warning that the contents of bottles and boxes were toxic chemical agents.

More than 200 children died in 1970 after swallowing toxic substances and several thousand suffered serious — sometimes permanent — injuries to eyes, mouths, throats and digestive tracts. One must remember that not all accidental poison deaths and injuries are tabulated statistically — for they are not always recognized or diagnosed.

One of the first words a baby should be taught is "hot." Always turn the handles of cooking utensils to the rear of the stove. Further keep the cords of electrical appliances out of a child's reach, whether or not they are connected. On his trips of discovery around the house, a small child soon learns to reach up to examine objects. An electric iron or a steaming percolator may be at the end of a dangling cord. Hanging tablecloths pose similar dangers.

Matches and knives should be kept away from children for obvious reasons, but it's alarming how often carelessness leads to tragedy. Never cut food on a baby's plate. His sudden lunge at the knife can result in severe cuts.

NEXT, CONSIDER the bathroom, another area of potential danger. The medicine cabinet, with its array of brightly colored containers, is an inviting target to a young child. In more than 35 years of practice as a pediatrician, I've been appalled by the heavy toll taken of children who swallowed medicines carelessly kept around the house.

To prevent accidental ingestion of medicines, the Council on Family Health recommends:

1. Keeping all medicines stored on the top shelf of the cabinet, or, if necessary, in some other area far out of the sight and reach of children.

2. Always read labels carefully in proper lighting, before and after administering any medicine to children.

3. Discard medicines promptly when the symptoms of illness have subsided.

A child less than 3-years-old never should be left alone in the bathtub, even for a moment to answer the phone or the doorbell. A moment can stretch into a minute — more than enough time to drown. If necessary to leave the bathroom, wrap the child in a towel and take him with you.

OTHER GENERAL safety rules: Put guard rails across stairs. . . . Make sure locks on doors cannot be reached by a child standing on tiptoe. . . . Screen all windows. . . . Whenever the dry cleaning and laundry are delivered in plastic bags, immediately tear up the bags; they can be a lethal trap for suffocating a child. . . . Put safety covers over electrical outlets. . . . Always place a heavy barrier in front of a fireplace when it is in use, even when a child appears to be asleep. Most babies master the trick of climbing out of cribs.

These protective measures may be a nuisance. They demand constant attention — but it's a price worth paying.

MRS. DONALD DOVE

MRS. DARREL HERMAN

MRS. DAVID COLLINS

Mayfair High School graduates Ramona Casado and David A. Dove recited nuptial vows Saturday afternoon at Chapel of Memories, Norwalk.

Among guests witnessing the ceremony were parents of the bride couple, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Casado and Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Dove, all of Lakewood.

Mrs. Mike Wickman and Sandy Duran attended the bride. David Warner was best man.

Collins-Gardea

Calyvary Baptist Church, Bellflower, was the setting Friday evening for the marriage of Elaine Susan Gardea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Gardea of Downey, to David-Scott Collins, son of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Collins of Bellflower. Mr. and Mrs. Duane Sheets were honor attendants.

The new Mrs. Collins was graduated from Warren High School and attended Bob Jones University, South Carolina. Her husband is an alumnus of Bellflower High. Both attended Cerritos College.

They will live in Bellflower after a honeymoon trip to Coronado Island and the Grand Canyon.

Herman-Pierce

Kristine Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Pierce of Long Beach, became the bride of Darrel Herman in a ceremony Saturday evening at First Baptist Church. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Herman of Long Beach.

Judy Pope was maid of honor. Duane Herman was his brother's best man.

The new Mrs. Herman was graduated from Mill-kan High School. Her husband, a Lakewood High alumnus, attends Long Beach City College.

Caballero-Jones

Faith Chapel on the Long Beach Naval Station was setting Saturday for the marriage ceremony uniting Cheryl A. Jones and Ronald S. Caballero.

Rosalie Goldstein was maid of honor for the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Budd A. Jones Sr. of Lakewood, while Steve Dean was best man for the bridegroom. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Caballero Sr. of San Leandro.

Following a honeymoon visit to Disneyland, the newlyweds will be at home in Long Beach.

The new Mrs. Caballero is an alumna of Lakewood High School; her husband is serving in the Navy.

DEAR ABBY

No starvation; likes men best

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I have never seen in your column. I am a 38-year-old woman who was married for 10 years and bore two children. My husband died four years ago. Thank God I was equipped to take a high-paying position in order to support myself and children.

I am reasonably attractive, but am not the type who goes to bars alone looking for male companionship. I've dated some, but not much, because as soon as a man learns that I am not so sex-starved that he can head for a motel on the second date, he looks for hungrier women.

My problem: Because I am not actively looking for a man, and have refused to be rushed into bed by all the so-called eligible bachelors who've dated me, the rumor is rampant that I prefer women. (This was told to me by two friends, one woman and the other a man.)

Of course, it's a lie, but I have become so self-conscious about it that I don't dare call a single woman and suggest we have dinner.

ner or go to a movie together. The fact that I was married and bore two children doesn't seem to matter. The rumor, I'm told, persists.

Now, you're supposed to be a wise woman, Abby. How does an innocent victim deny such a rumor?

PERSECUTED

DEAR PERSECUTED: The rumor may not be as rampant as you were led to believe it is. I would question the motives of one who would bring such a rumor to my attention. (Could a male be attempting to persuade you to "prove" the rumor false?)

Or could a woman, who herself preferred women, be "testing" you? Don't refrain from socializing with women. Forget the rumor, and continue to be happy as you always have.

Problems? Trust Abby.

For a personal reply, write to ABBY, BOX 69700, L.A., CALIF. 90069 and enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

YW to outfit tots for school

Back-to-school clothing—free of charge—will be available at the YWCA, 550 Pacific Ave., during a two-day "Clothing Event" Friday and Saturday.

Each child will receive a free outfit of clothing from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. or as long as the supply lasts. All children must be accompanied by adults.

YWCA members are asking the public for donations of time, wearable clothing or money. Monetary contributions will go toward the purchase of new sneakers, underwear and socks.

Clothing may be brought to the YWCA building. Pick-up service and volunteer information may be requested by calling the Y.

Mrs. Marvin Tischer, chairman of the program planning committee, is in charge of the event.

Psychologist to speak to single parents' unit

"Divorce — The Period of Adjustment," will be the topic of psychologist Christopher Convery Jr. at the meeting of Single Parents in a Couple's World, Long Beach Chapter, Thursday evening at the Mayfair High School cafeteria, 6000 N. Woodruff, Lakewood.

Sponsored by the Community Service Division of Cerritos Community College, the program will begin at 7 p.m. and is open to the public.

The forum is the first of a series of group discussions and interactions led by Convery; marriage and family counselor and an instructor at East Los Angeles City College. Future discussions, held the first Thursday of the month, include: "Social Life as a Single Parent," October; "Single Parents and Parent Effectiveness," November; and "Self-Acceptance is Your Best Support," December.

VFW card fete

Golden State Auxiliary 279, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will sponsor a public card party at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday at Veterans Memorial Building as a benefit for the National Home for Children of Veterans.

Getting Zonite Liquid Douche free isn't the best reason to try it. The best reason is the fact that it's recommended because it contains no perfumes or coloring, just hypo-allergenic ingredients.

So is the fact that Zonite cleans, deodorizes and protects better than vinegar.

That's because Zonite contains an anti-bacterial ingredient that acts to prevent odor and keep you clean and refreshed longer than vinegar ever could.

Safer, hypo-allergenic Zonite. Use it and feel confident.

New games people play on CBS

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

Games may or may not be your cup of TV. If they are, you'll be happy that CBS-TV is introducing three new ones this morning.

Since it's Labor Day, the whole family will have an opportunity to watch the fun. Just delay that picnic a bit.

The three half-hour programs premiering on Channel 2 today are "The Joker's Wild," "The New Price Is Right" and "Gambit." They're on, one after the other, from 9 to 10:30 a.m., and they'll be seen regularly Monday through Friday.

JACK BARRY hosts "The Joker's Wild," which is produced by Jack Barry Productions Inc. It comes on at 9 o'clock and is said to involve skill, good judgment and good luck as three contestants match wits for valuable merchandise and money prizes.

The way I understand it, each participant pulls the arm of a device that resembles a slot machine, which locks in various categories on a giant wheel or board. The contestant answers various questions as different categories show up at each turn of the wheel.

Two or three jokers, or wild cards, at one turn increase the chances for a winner to earn additional money and the chance to go on to receive merchandise gifts and to return the next day.

BOB BARKER is host for "The New Price Is Right," a Goodson-Todman production, which comes on at 9:30.

It is described as a "fast-paced, updated version" of the popular game series of a few seasons back.

Contestants will be selected daily from the audience in a quick opening round called "Higher-Lower," in which a player must guess the exact retail price of an item to qualify. Qualifiers then vie for prizes by evaluating retail prices of additional merchandise. Under the new format, they play against the house rather than against fellow contestants as in the former series.

Lost Barker has been on the syndicated series "Truth or Consequences" for the past 16 years and also has served, since 1967, as master of ceremonies for the annual broadcasts of both the "Miss Universe Beauty Pageant" and the "Miss U.S.A. Beauty Pageant."

WINK MARTINDALE draws the assignment as host for "Gambit," last of the three half-hour game shows.

Married couples will compete against each other in "Gambit," which combines strategy in playing blackjack, or 21, with question-and-answer quizzes.

After host Martindale poses a question, the first couple to press a buzzer and answer correctly controls the points and thus has a better chance of winning the game. The first couple to reach 21 and win two rounds gets to play the final gambit board for merchandise prizes and to meet a new set of challengers.

"Gambit" is a Heatter-Quigley production.

All three of the new game shows are produced in Hollywood.

The daily contests hardly carry the significance of the Olympics, but many viewers seem to get a kick out of watching such games.

"DINAH'S PLACE," starring Dinah Shore, begins its third season on NBC-TV this morning (9 to 9:30, Ch. 4).

Andy Griffith is Dinah's guest for this morning's premiere of the Monday-through-Friday series. He shows Dinah his 1930 Model "A" Ford, a collector's dream car, and both Andy and Dinah do some singing.

Two women from the world of politics — Patricia Nixon Cox and Eleanor McGovern — will be Dinah's guests later in the week, the President's daughter on Wednesday and Sen. McGovern's wife on Thursday.

Gets record sixth gold medal Spitz leaves his mark again

MUNICH (Special) — America's magnificent Mark Spitz knifed to his sixth world record-shattering victory in swimming Sunday and became the greatest gold prospector in the history of the Olympic Games.

The triumph in 51.22 seconds for the 22-year-old from Carmichael, Calif., in the 100-meter freestyle came moments after 15-year-old Shane Gould of Australia suffered a second shattering disappointment at the hands of America's girl swimming stars.

Kecia Rothhammer, a 15-year-old high school student from Santa Clara, swam away from Miss Gould in the Australian's specialty, the 800-meter freestyle, and won in the world record time of 8:53.68. Shane was seeking her fourth gold medal.

Shane had been beaten previously by 16-year-old Sandra Neilson of El Monte, in the 100-meter freestyle.

So now Spitz is on the throne of swimming by himself, going for an incredible cache of seven gold medals in the men's 400-meter medley relay today.

The most gold medals ever won in the past by an Olympian were five, grabbed by Italian fencing master Nedo Nadi in the 1920 Games at Antwerp.

There have been several quadruple gold medalists — Paavo Nurmi, the flying Finn; the great Jesse Owens and swimmer Don Schollander — but no performance compares with that of Spitz.

Away from the swimming hall, where the United States also won the women's 400-meter medley relay, the loudest cheers were raised for the host Germans. They won three of the five track and field golds and a silver as the crowd of 80,000 in the Olympic Stadium roared its approval for the Germans' best one-day Olympian performance since the 1936 Games in Berlin.

A bearded, balding West German school teacher, Klaus Wolfermann, upset Russia's world record-holder, Janis Lusis, in the javelin with a mighty heave of 296 feet, 10 inches. Hildgard Falck, a housewife, grabbed the women's 800-meter race in 1:58.5, equalling her world record.

And Bernd Kannenberg, a husky West Germany Army Sergeant, won the taxing 50-kilometer walk, covering the more than 31 miles in 3 hours, 56 minutes and 11 seconds.

The other track golds went to Laase Viren of Finland, who steadied after stumbling and won the men's 10,000-meter run in a world record clocking of 27 minutes, 38.34 seconds, and Mary Peters of Britain, who captured the women's pentathlon with a world record total of 4,801 points.

In track and field, the United States was forced to settle for two bronze. William Schmidt, and Army Private First Class from Muse, Pa., finished third in the javelin — the first medal in the event for the Americans in 20 years — and Larry Young, the 29-year-old Navy veteran from Sibley, Mo., was third in the 50-kilometer walk.

World record-breaking performances by American men could not catch up with Gunnar Larsson, the broad-shouldered Swede who won his second gold with a victory in the 200-meter individual medley. He previously had won the 400 medley.

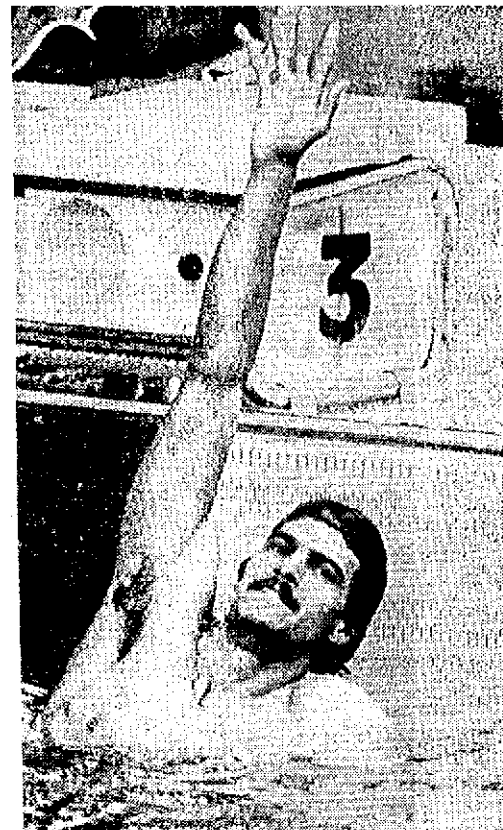

Larsson, the former Long Beach State U. competitor, ripped two seconds off his world mark in winning a sensational 2:07.7. Tom McKee of Newtown Square, Pa., a University of Florida sophomore, finished second in 2:08.37. Steve Furniss of Santa Ana, was third in 2:08.35

Glory that was Canada has gone

Oh, the glory that was Canada's, where has it gone? There they were, the hated Ruskies, making team Canada, a collection of National Hockey League all-stars, look worse than amateurs.

After Russia's 7-3 victory in the opening game of the International World Series of Hockey, things will never be the same. The myth of Canadian invincibility has been shattered. The arrogance of the NHL has caught up with itself.

The manner in which the Russians dominated the game must have been galling to the veterans of Canadian hockey, for the Soviet Union used a style of play they learned from the Canadians a quarter century ago. It's a style in which stickhandling, passing, wrist-shooting and position are of utmost importance.

Canada abandoned this brand of hockey two decades ago when the slap shot became the rage. It worked at first because goalies did not yet have face masks and were terrified at the prospect of losing an eye or a mouthful of teeth to a blazing puck.

Instead of the beauty of stickhandling, clever drop passes and accurate wrist shots, the Canadians went to the helter-skelter game in which the puck is shot into the attacking zone and chased wildly, often producing crunching corner collisions.

As the game was introduced into markets in which the beauties of stickhandling and passing were not appreciated, hypodroming in the manner of wrestling and roller derbies became the vogue. Fights, few of which ever caused any physical damage to the contestants, seemed a vital part of all hockey scripts.

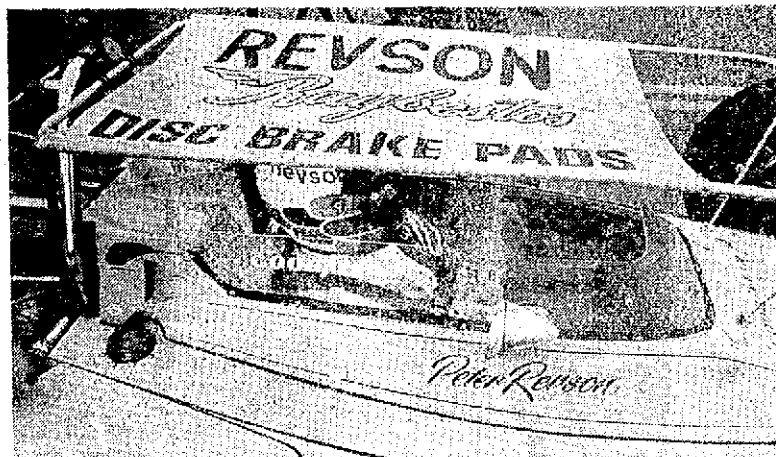

The game became less and less a contest of skill, and more and more an exhibition of show business and feigned savagery.

Meanwhile, the Russians went steadily about improving the brand of hockey they had learned from the Canadians. Isn't it ironic that the Canadians will have to go to the Russians to relearn their own game?

CUFF STUFF: Sports Illustrated magazine is having no luck at all trying to get a cover picture of UCLA's Bill Walton for its college basketball preview edition in late November. Walton tells the magazine he is miffed because Tom McMillen of Mansfield, Pa., was chosen the outstanding prep basketball player in the United States two years ago. Walton certainly is correct in pointing out that the magazine succumbed to Eastern prejudices and made a giant miscalculation (no pun intended), but he is being something less than mature when he uses this as an excuse for not wanting his picture taken. . . . And isn't it true that several Southland softball teams are negotiating for the services of the immortal Harvey Sterkel, a pitcher from Aurora, Ill.?

Observers of Cal football believe Vince Ferragamo, freshman quarterback out of Banning High in Wilmington, will win a starting job for the Bears if given a chance to display his talents under game conditions. . . . A rising Southern collegiate basketball power is in trouble up to its neck with the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. Probation seems likely when the infractions committee of the NCAA meets again in October. . . . Indiana State will appear in the International City Basketball Classic in Long Beach in December of 1973. Indiana State gave John Wooden his first college basketball coaching job. In retrospect, it seems as though someone made a wise decision. . . . John McKay is quietly grooming 6-4, 120-pound Chris Limahelu as his field goal kicker on long-distance attempts. Limahelu's brother starred in the same role for San Diego State. In practice, Chris has boomed some through from near midfield. . . . Ron Scribner, who gave up a starting defensive backfield position to try for the No. 1 quarterback job in UCLA's Wishbone formation, apparently has made the most progress of any Bruin since spring practice. But people who know the UCLA situation believe Mark Harmon still has a lock on the starting job. Scribner couldn't pass a muster as a freshman, but now is an adequate thrower. . . . Latest reports would indicate that perhaps only one member of Uncle Sam's Olympic basketball team will sign a professional contract when the Games have been completed. He is 6-10 center Dwight Jones, who has surprised everyone with his effectiveness. The San Diego Conquistadors of the American Basketball Assn. own rights to Jones. . . . Long Beach State's 1972-73 home basketball schedule is by far the most attractive the school has had. In addition to Pacific Coast Athletic Association games with University of Pacific, San Jose State, San Diego State, UC Santa Barbara, Fresno State and Los Angeles State, the 49ers host North Texas State of the rugged Missouri Valley and major independents Marquette and Creighton. Long Island University is one of the teams in the International City Classic. . . . The Long Beach Arena, where all of the 49er home games will be played, will make some changes in seating so spectators will feel closer to the game. The court will be moved toward the West end, and bleachers will rise on that end and on the two sides to connect with the lower balconies. Seats will be 8 feet or so closer to the playing floor. Long Beach State coach Jerry Tarkanian is delighted with the new arrangement. "It may cut down on our seating capacity a little," he says, "but if the changes can make the action seem livelier, I'm all for it." Tarkanian has complained in the past that the huge arena absorbed crowd

McCluskey surprises in Calif. 500 'circus'

ONTARIO — Roger McCluskey won the Ringing Bros., Barnum and Bailey 500 Sunday — a race that has been erroneously called the California 500 for three years.

Built at a cost of $25.5 million and christened on Sept. 5, 1970, the spacious Ontario Motor Speedway stands as a monument to automobile racing. Its premier event, however, has become legendary — for all the wrong reasons.

A carnival atmosphere has surrounded the race since its inception. For example, a favorite simply cannot win. Come to think of it, finishing is a major accomplishment.

Jim McElreath started 18th and won in 1970 — and only eight were running at the end. Joe Leonard started 11th last year, and an "army" of 11 followed him home.

But Sunday's race outdid itself. You had to be there to believe it. A few tidbits:

— Pole-sitter Jerry Grant, who qualified one of Dan Gurney's Eagles at 199.600 mph, scattered his engine into a thousand little pieces on the first of three PACE LAPS. He was credited with "zero laps and 33rd finishing position."

— A family of jackrabbits twice darted onto the track, forcing 10 of the first 15 laps to be run under the caution flag.

— The race was red flagged (stopped) on lap 78 because of heavy rains. It remained that way from 12:31 p.m. to 2:29 before the surface was sufficiently dry for racing.

Messersmith blanks Birds as Angel streak continues

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Incredible. Fantastic. Unbelievable. Magnificent.

Pick one or more superlatives and apply it to the Angel pitching staff. They all fit handsomely.

One of the most amazing home stands in Angel history ended Sunday much in the same manner as it began — with rival hitters scratching their heads in wonderment.

Andy Messersmith shut out the Baltimore Orioles for 10 brilliant innings and then Ken Berry singled home the winning run in the bottom of the 10th, giving the Angels a 1-0 victory over the Orioles.

three rivals — Detroit, New York and Boston.

— produced an earned run average of 0.32, permitting just five earned runs in 87 innings.

— in three games against Detroit, restricted the Tigers to two runs and 10 hits.

— in three games against Baltimore, held the Orioles to three runs — only one of which was earned — and 16 hits in 28 innings.

When the challenging Tigers limped out of the Big A after three successive losses, manager Billy Martin bluntly opined, "The

ANGELS OF DAY

ANDY MESSERSMITH fired 10-inning shutout and KEN BERRY singled home winning run as Angels shaded Baltimore, 1-0.

Angels have the four best starters in this league."

Sunday afternoon, Messersmith sat in front of his locker, a smile creasing his pleasant features, and said, "I'll bet Earl Weaver (the Baltimore skipper) is probably thinking the same thing."

Messersmith doled out just five hits over 10 innings, posting his third consecutive complete game victory and improving his record to 6-8. In his last three games, The Baron has authored a four-hitter, a three-hitter and now a five-hitter. Over his last 28 innings, he has given up exactly one earned run.

"I feel I'm all the way back," he said, alluding to the surgery he underwent early this summer on the middle finger of his pitching hand.

"I feel good and I'm throwing well," he said. "Besides, I have to keep up with those other three guys."

The other three, of course, are Nolan Ryan, Clyde Wright and Rudy May.

"I thought to myself last night while watching Rudy

Nice and easy does it every time

Over the hill at 40? Not McCluskey

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

ONTARIO — As Roger McCluskey came around for the checkered flag in Sunday's California 500, a member of his crew boosted a pretty brunette in an orange hot pants suit up onto the pit wall for a better look.

"Your wife was sure excited when you won," McCluskey was told.

"Uh," he replied, "I'm not married. Was it a little girl in an orange outfit? That's my sweetheart."

McCluskey's success offered reassurance that not all men at 40 are (a) married, (b) over the hill or (c) both.

In fact, that's the average age of winners of the Cal 500. Jim McElreath was 42 when he won the inaugural; Joe Leonard was 33 last year.

The strategies were carbon copies and lessons to the young and overzealous at Ontario: nice and easy does it.

"I planned on running in the low 180s (mph) and staying within tracking distance, if I could," said McCluskey.

His plan was perfect. McCluskey was eighth when the race was re-started after the rain delay, but had to beat only one of the preceding drivers — Mike Hiss — to win. The other six dropped out.

Also, Roger was the fastest qualifier among the 10 cars running at the end.

It was a lesson in patience. This was McCluskey's

10th 500-mile race, including 11 at Indianapolis, but his only other two USAC Championship event victories were relatively insignificant — a dirt track win at Springfield, Ill., in 1968 and a paved oval win at Langhorne, Pa., in '66.

He has enjoyed success on the USAC stock circuit, winning national titles in '69 and '70 but that's a poor relation of the NASCAR competition.

"I've been driving a lot of years and really had nothing to write home about," he said. "I'll have to admit that I've been discouraged on a number of occasions, but I've never been so discouraged that I thought I'd quit."

All along he has maintained a close group of friends who kept the faith.

One of them, Phil Martinez of Parnelli Jones' team, was in McCluskey's pit at the finish after all three Viceroy cars had cashed in.

"Put the dollar sign on the board," Martinez yelled to Roger's signalman, fearing that McCluskey's crew — unaccustomed as it was to victory — might forget the traditional victory gesture.

McCluskey will be hauling about 63,005 worth of dollar signs home to Tucson, Ariz., his half of the $127,000.00 winner's purse.

The other half goes to car owner Lindsey Hopkins, who will find that it will not come close to paying for his investment in Sunday's victory.

Hopkins and McCluskey started the year with one of the new boat-shaped Antares racers but discarded it after it flopped at Indianapolis. Then Hopkins bought the '71 McLaren with which Peter Revson won the Indy pole last year, and crew chief Don Koda prepared it.

"Lindsey and everybody worked very hard," said McCluskey. "Six weeks ago we came here with the express purpose of preparing for this race. We wanted to eliminate every possibility of failure."

One of McCluskey's worst dangers was the family of jackrabbits that upset the early part of the race, but he said the hares never bothered him or the other drivers.

"I saw some rabbits last week but I didn't see any today. In fact, when those yellow lights came on I couldn't figure out what was happening. I'd go all around the track and couldn't see a car off or anything. All I could see was the trucks full of people that looked like soldiers, running all around."

"Actually I think the rabbits suffered more than we did."

McCluskey wound up the long day receiving a trophy from Tricia Nixon Cox — some trophy girl — and a gold ring with the speedway's symbol.

"It's a good fit," he said, slipping it onto his ring finger.

Then he left to meet the brunette in the orange outfit.

Brodie humbles

Raiders, 34-21

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Quarterback John Brodie humbled Oakland's defense with three early touchdowns passes Sunday to lead the San Francisco 49ers to a 34-21 National Football League exhibition victory over the Raiders.

Brodie, playing only the made a one-yard touchdown run for the 49ers in the fourth period when Steve Spurrier was at quarterback.

Oakland, now 4-1, had won nine consecutive exhibition games over two seasons and was this year's only unbeaten and untied team prior to Sunday. San Francisco is 2-3.

The game drew the largest home stadium crowd in 49er history, 61,237.

Oakland's offense was limited to 89 yards in the first half, and the only touchdown, which tied the score at 7-7, came after a fumble recovery gave the Raiders the ball at San Francisco's 8-yard line.

first half, completed 14 of 20 passes for 206 yards against the Oakland defensive unit which hadn't allowed a touchdown in 13 consecutive quarters.

San Francisco went 75 yards the first time it got the ball, with Brodie passing 12 yards to Vic Washington for the touchdown. Preston Riley caught a 44-yard scoring pass later in the first quarter and made a one-handed grab of a Brodie pass in the second quarter on a four-yard touchdown play that sent the 49ers ahead 21-7.

Daryl Lamonica connected on tosses of 4 and 26 yards to tight end Ray Chester and 44-year-old George Blanda passed 39 yards to rookie Cliff Branch for Oakland's touchdowns.

Bruce Gossett kicked field goals from 23 and 27 yards for San Francisco while Jimmy Thomas

Lehman

L.B. golf leader

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

A 17-year-old Orange Countian who has never won a tournament and who is playing Long Beach courses for the first time is the leader of the Long Beach Medal Play Golf Championship with the final round today at SkyLinks.

Rick Lehman, a June graduate of Los Amigos High in Fountain Valley who works on the driving range at Mile Square, shot his second consecutive 1-under-par 71 Sunday at rainy Recreation Park to assume a one-stroke lead over Tony Abreu of Long Beach.

Abreu, often a contender but never a winner, shot the day's best round, a 36-34-70, over a course which brought only complaints for the poor condition of many of the greens and the high grass in most of the fairways.

Five players who have won tournaments before have the experience to put the heat on the leaders are within striking distance today. They are Fred Good, Mike Krantz, Beau Baugh and the Richardsons, dad John and son Kemp.

Baugh, the first-day co-leader at 70, slipped to a 74 to fall into a tie for third place with Krantz (73), the Long Beach Match Play champion, and a 26-year-old student from Buena Park, Marshall Hanson (71).

Good (73) and K. Richardson (72) are deadlocked at 145 with Ted Berner, an unknown high school vice principal from Garden Grove who used to be the varsity basketball coach at Centennial in the early 1960s.

J. Richardson stands at 146 with a strong junior, Chuck Wallace (74), and Robert Weeks, the Los Angeles forklift operator who shared the first-day lead. Weeks was one of those caught in the rain and slipped to a 76. Richardson eagled the par-5 17th hole 25-foot putt for a 72.

THE HARE IS HOUNDED

Ontario Motor Speedway's California was interrupted Sunday by jackrabbits, among other things. Animals darted onto track, causing 10 of first 15 laps to be run under caution flag. Several were caught, such as this one, by assorted officials and fans. —Staff Photo by TOM SHAW

Sifford, Johnston take lead

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — Curtis Sifford and Ralph Johnston both shot four-under par 67s Sunday to tie for the third round lead at 12-under par in the $125,000 Greater Hartford at windswept Wethersfield Country Club.

Johnston put away four birdies on the 6,883-yard course while Sifford had five birdies and a bogey and both men pulled out of a tie for eighth place after two rounds to move into the lead with one round to go. The two had 54-hole totals of 201.

Lee Elder shot a 69 Sunday to move into a third-place tie with Deane Beman at 202. Ken Still was fifth at 203 while Lee Trevino, who held the second round lead with Beman, went to the clubhouse at 204.

Sifford, in his fourth year on the Professional Golfers Assn. tour, said he was crossed up on occasion by a "tricky wind" that hit 35 mph in gusts and was "blowing in circles."

His major problem, however, came on the 404-yard fourth hole where he "eased up on the ball because of the wind and I left myself a long putt."

Billie Jean breezes

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. — Defending champions Stan Smith and Billie Jean King scored relatively easy straight set victories Sunday but ninth seeded Marty Riessen was an upset victim and Rod Laver barely survived a five-set scare in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Riessen, from Evanston, Ill., dropped a third round match to South Africa's unseeded Frew McMillen 6-2, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4.

The red-haired Laver, a 34-year-old globe-trotter who is third-seeded in this tournament, finally pulled out a three hour, 6-2, 4-6, 6-7, 6-1, 7-6 decision from Jaime Fillol of Chile.

Smith eliminated Allan Stone of Australia 6-3, 7-6, 7-5.

While Smith, of Pasadena, was scoring his third round triumph, Mrs. King, from Long Beach, raced past Esme Emmanuel of South Africa 6-1, 6-3 in a women's second round match.

Driver killed

in race mishap

GARNETT, Kan. (AP) — Ralph A. Miller, a 46-year-old Wichita driver, was killed Sunday afternoon when his zinc Daytona car, traveling at an estimated 145 miles an hour, collided with a second vehicle at the ninth Lake Garnet Castrol Grand Prix here.

Miller's car slipped through the air, landing upright on the grass beside the track. He was dead by the time spectators reached his smoking car. The driver of the second car was not injured.

Take your pick -- Baltimore, N.Y., Detroit or Boston

Standing room only atop AL East

Combined News Services

There's standing room only atop the American League East today—baseball's one division that seemingly no one wants to win.

The only team to gain ground Sunday was Boston and the Red Sox were rained out at home against Kansas City.

Baltimore, Detroit and New York all lost—leaving the Orioles only a half-game ahead of Detroit.

Oakland, meanwhile, re-maintained 2½ games ahead of Chicago in the West—a fat margin by comparison.

The A's nipped the Tigers 1-0, Chicago blanked New York 5-0, the Angels out of trouble in the early innings to record his 18th win in 25 decisions.

Sal Bando, hitless in his last 24 at-bats, slammed a tie-breaking home run in the fifth inning.

Hunter retired the last 15 batters in a row after Mickey Stanley opened the fifth with a double.

Durable Wilbur Wood became the winningest White Sox pitcher in over a half century as he blanked the Yankees on five hits.

It was his 23rd victory of the season—highest by a Chicago hurler since 1921 when Red Faber won 25.

The Yankees were thoroughly handcuffed by the knuckleball specialist this season, scoring two earned runs in 36 innings.

Former Wilson High player Case Cox, recently acquired from Texas, started for the Yankees and stayed even until the fourth when the Chicks knocked him out with three runs.

Successive one-out singles by Carlos May, Mike Andrews and Ed Spiezio scored the first run. After a passed ball moved the runners into scoring position, Ed Herrmann was intentionally walked to fill the bases. Cox fanned Luis Alvarado but walked Wood on four pitches to force in a second run and end his Yankee debut.

Dick Tidrow threw a four-hitter and the Indians took advantage of six Minnesota errors to thwart the Twins.

San Pedro's Joe Lovitto singled to cap a three-run second inning as Texas defeated Milwaukee behind the eight-hit pitching of Mike Paul—the former Pius X High and Corrits College performer.

It was only Paul's second complete game of the season.

Philadelphia proved again Sunday it is a different baseball team when Steve Carlton is pitching.

The Phillies scored eight runs in the third inning at Atlanta as Carlton was able to breeze to his 22nd victory, 8-0.

The contest also turned out to be another milestone for Hank Aaron, who became baseball's all-time total base leader with a single in the first inning that enabled him to pass Stan Musial at 6,135.

Carlton struck out four to pad his major league-leading total to 263. He also leads the NL in complete games with 23 and shutouts at eight.

Joe Lis and Greg Luzinski slammed back-to-back home runs in the third. Lis' shot came with two men on base.

In other games, New York handed Houston and new manager Leo Durocher its second setback in a row, 2-1; Pittsburgh shaded San Francisco by an identical 2-1 margin; Cincinnati came from behind to beat Montreal, 4-3; and, San Diego snapped a seven-game losing streak with a 3-0 victory at Chicago.

Bud Harrelson hit a two out single to left field to score Ted Martinez and best Houston which had won five in a row after Durocher was first hired before losing Saturday night and again Sunday.

Richie Hebner doubled

three games in a row since the manager's stormy clubhouse meeting Friday night.

Wes Parker drove in four runs Sunday with a triple, single and sacrifice fly; Willie Crawford slugged a two-run homer, his eighth; and Bill Singer his sixth game with relief help from Pete Richert.

Perhaps it's futile effort, but it's Alston's one-man crusade to hypo the Dodgers for their last-gasp run at Cincinnati which begins this evening at Dodger Stadium with a doubleheader against the Reds.

The first game begins at 5 p.m., the cocktail hour. Will it be last call for the Dodgers?

"The day we're 11½ out with 11 games to go is when I'll say we're out of it," said Alston, steadfastly refusing to toss in the towel.

Tommy John (11-5) and Claude Osteen (15-9) will be the Dodgers' pitchers against the Reds' Don Gullett (7-7) and Jim McGlothlin (7-6).

It will be the Dodgers' sixth doubleheader of the season and so far they have ven't won one. They've split three and lost two others, explaining, perhaps, why Walter O'Malley doesn't schedule more of them.

The Dodgers arrive home one-half game worse off than they were when they left for their midwest safari 11 days ago—11 games behind the Reds.

They also arrive home $800 lighter, a testimony to Alston's swift change in regulations.

It began Friday in St. Louis when Alston levied a $100 fine on Willie Davis for missing a sign. There also was a lengthy and, at times, loud meeting in which Alston banned card-playing in the clubhouse and also informed his athletes they were to appear on time at the ballpark.

Maury Willis was the first to test the new rule, arriving tardy to Saturday's game, and immediately was slapped with a $100 fine.

Sunday morning, Bill Buckner, Wes Parker, Bobby Valentine and Crawford contributed $100 each to the growing kitty when they walked in 30 minutes late.

Buckner was specially miffed by the heavy fine but not half as mad as he was when he was thrown out at third in the first inning, the play which led to Alston's ouster.

Buckner was hit on the right wrist by a pitch and appeared to have easily made third base on Willie Davis' single to right. But umpire Mel Steiner called him out, touching off a furious argument. Moments later Alston got the thumb.

Buckner also had to leave, going to the hospital to have his wrist X-rayed although there was no fracture. Manny Mota replaced Buckner and all he did was collect three consecutive singles.

Trailing 2-1, the Dodgers unloaded on loser Reggie Cleveland for four runs in the sixth inning, two on Parker's triple and then Crawford followed with his home run.

Singer, who's been provided with just 19 runs in his 13 defeats, worked into the eighth but was relieved when he walked the first two batters. Richert entered and retired six Cardinals in a row to preserve the win.

DODGER DOPE: In Cincinnati's only two previous games in Dodger Stadium this season the Reds won them both 5-0 and 5-4. Four games with the eighth but was relieved when he walked the first two batters. Richert entered and retired six Cardinals in a row to preserve the win.

Pitching Tuesday night will be Don Sutton (14-9) against Ross Grimsley (12-6) with Al Downing (8-5) slated Wednesday evening against Gary Ladd (14-4). Ladd is 2-0 in his 13 starts, best among National League starters.

The Dodgers' Bakersfield club lost the California League playoffs, dropping consecutive games to champion Modesto.

The Dodgers ended up 39-33 against the Eastern Division clubs and 8-4 against St. Louis, their best record against an East team... they ended the trip with seven wins in 11 games.

Ex-claimers seek rich purse at Los Alamitos

Rocky Denuedo and Scent of Lime, a pair of youngsters who were taken from claiming races earlier in the meeting, will try to show they belong among the elite of the 2-year-old division at Los Alamitos by taking on tonight what is left of their age-group in the $50,000 Juvenile, an invitational race at 400 yards.

Quality horses waiting in the wings for the two upstarts are Go Chickie Go, Burma Shan, Ditto Olene and Hop Skip and Jump.

Others in the field are Mellita's Charger, Charlie-go, Lofsa Decka and Five Chics.

Rocky Denuedo was dropped into a $3,000 claiming race for his debut in mid-August and responded by 2 1/2 lengths, but it as a costly win as trainer Larry Sharp, acting for Florence Arzuff, took the youngster.

That exchange could be one of the breed's all-time bargains as he has won his two starts since then by daylight when bet odds-on.

Scent of Lime finished a distant last in his racing bow at Bay Meadows, but graduated in his next start and then has taken five of eight starts at the Orange County track, the last pair being for trainer Don Murray after a $5,000 claim.

claimers are modest compared to the $55,131 bankroll won by Go Chickie Go, but the daughter of Go Man Go still must be considered a hard-luck lass.

She has won six of nine starts, with the other finishes being seconds. But two of those runnerups came in the $15,000 Golden State Futurity and the $93,700 Kindergarten. Difference in payoff for those losses was $62,653.

Windy's Daughter is expected to be the public favorite, strong support is predicted for Bold Liz, the Hollywood Juvenile champion winner who has failed in three attempts to snap the filly's unbeaten streak.

Junior Miss Stakes winner Rosalie May Wynn is also in the field which is completed by Protest, Siek and Fleet, King's Edge, Play School and Lucky Jen.

If all eight start the winner will earn $59,965.

Windy's Daughter, to be ridden by Bill Shoemaker, began her career with an easy maiden victory at Hollywood Park and has since reeled off five stake wins in a row including a two and one-half length score over Bold Liz in the Sorrento Stakes, the only Del Mar start for both fillies.

The rich Hollywood Lassie Stakes was run in two divisions with Bold Liz and Windy's Daughter scoring easy triumphs in separate sections. Windy's Daughter then rested on her laurels to await the Del Mar meeting while Bold Liz challenged and beat the best colts at Hollywood Park in the juvenile championship.

Apprentice Steve Valdez will be aboard Bold Liz who was no match for Windy's Daughter in the Sorrento.
